Subject: Report of Faculty Retirement

Action Requested: Adoption of Retirement Memoir

Christine L. Holland, M.D., clinical assistant professor of internal medicine in the Medical School, retired from active faculty status on February 17, 2017.

Dr. Holland received her B.S. degree from the University of Rhode Island in 1971 and her M.D. degree from Loyola University in 1978. She completed an internal medicine internship (1978-79), an internal medicine residency (1979-81), and an allergy and clinical immunology fellowship (1981-83) at Brown University. Dr. Holland practiced as a physician in Maryland, New Jersey, and New York. She served as an assistant professor of clinical medicine and as co-director of the Allergy and Immunology Training Program at the University of Medicine and Dentistry, New Jersey Medical School from 1986-90. She joined the University of Michigan faculty as a clinical assistant professor of internal medicine in 2005.

Dr. Holland is a leader in the field of internal medicine with special expertise in the diagnosis and treatment of allergic and immunologic conditions. She authored a number of noteworthy articles in high impact journals such as the Annals of Allergy, Asthma & Immunology, Effective Clinical Practice, the International Journal of Cardiology, and the Journal of Allergy and Clinical Immunology. Dr. Holland was actively involved in several professional organizations, including the American Academy of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology; the American College of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology; and the Western New York Allergy Society. A superb teacher and mentor, she generously shared her time and expertise as a member and attending physician of the University's Allergy and Immunology Fellowship Training Program since 2005. Dr. Holland has served as a member of the Promedica Health Group Disease Management Committee (1998-2002), a member of the Quality Council in the UM Department of Internal Medicine (2015-17), and as chair of the Quality Improvement and Patient Safety committee in the UM Division of Allergy and Clinical Immunology (2015-17).

The Regents now salute this distinguished faculty member by naming Christine L. Holland, clinical assistant professor emerita of internal medicine.
