COMMITTEE APPOINTMENTS

Recommendations for approval of new appointments and promotions for regular associate and full professor ranks, with tenure
ACTION REQUEST: Faculty Appointment Approval

NAME: Caryl Flinn

TITLE: Professor of Screen Arts and Cultures, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TENURE STATUS: With Tenure

EFFECTIVE DATE: September 1, 2011

APPOINTMENT PERIOD: University Year

On the recommendation of the Executive Committees of the Department of Screen Arts and Cultures and the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the appointment of Caryl Flinn as professor of screen arts and cultures, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective September 1, 2011.

ACADEMIC DEGREES

Caryl Flinn received her Bachelor of Arts from Trinity College and her Master of Arts and Doctorate in film and broadcasting from the University of Iowa.

PROFESSIONAL RECORD

Professor Flinn began her teaching career as an assistant professor at the University of Florida (1987-1993). She was appointed as an associate professor at the University of Toronto (1993-1999) and at the University of Arizona (2000-2004). She was promoted to professor in 2004 and had been head of the Department of Gender and Women’s Studies since 2010.

SUMMARY OF EVALUATION

Professor Flinn is recognized by her peers as standing among the pioneers of film studies. She is a major film scholar who brings many talents to the Department of Screen Arts and Cultures. Her research focus is gender, sexuality, and ideology in film music. She has published three books that have established her as one of the leading historians and theorists of film music, and has co-edited a major anthology on film music. She reviews submissions to a number of journals, including Cinema Journal, and is founding editorial board member of two journals (Music and the Moving Image and The Journal of Film Music).

Professor Flinn is an excellent instructor who scores well with students and has taught a wide variety of undergraduate courses. Her graduate seminars, and extensive graduate mentoring, are particularly well received.
EXCERPTS FROM EXTERNAL LETTERS

Reviewer (A)
"...Flinn’s greatest contribution to the study of film music comes in her deft application of critical cultural theory to the ways scholars can interrogate music in screen media. ... While Flinn is not a music scholar—she points that out in Strains of Utopia—she has devoted much of her scholarly attention to the ways that music and image interact."

Reviewer (B)
“All of Caryl’s writing engages cogently with theory. Everything is readable and teachable: she has a rare gift for story-telling, clever turns of phrase, and vibrant analysis. Top journals...have published her articles. Respected academic presses...publish her books and essays.”

Reviewer (C)
“Her pioneering work appears as required reading in syllabi everywhere, and her intellectual interests continue to lead her in exciting new directions. She qualifies to my mind as one of the most astute scholar[s] of film music today and also as an exceptionally sophisticated practitioner of feminist theory.”

Reviewer (D)
“...[Flinn] is one of the most important film-music scholars in the world. ... Compared with other leading scholars in the relevant field(s)...[her] accomplishments have been more extensive and sustained, and have covered a far greater range of subject-matter. The sheer extent of her monographs alone (let alone the breadth of their international influence) places her at the very forefront of her peer group.”

Reviewer (E)
“She is a very engaging speaker who does not shy away from thorny issues or difficult theory, nor should she as she has the ability to make such material accessible without oversimplifying it. I was not surprised to see so many invited lectures on her vitae.”

Reviewer (F)
“...whether it be her work on Ethel Merman or on Rosa von Praunheim, all of Professor Flinn’s scholarship demonstrates wit and intellectual joy. She is a film scholar of the highest caliber.”

Reviewer (G)
“...Caryl Flinn is an original and accomplished scholar, with a distinguished record of important publications, honors, and presentations. ...there is no other senior scholar in the field who I respect more, and no other scholar who I believe possesses the intellectual range or personal skills so critical to building a first-rate program.”

PUBLICATIONS

SUMMARY

Professor Flinn is one of the finest scholars of film music and a prominent feminist film scholar. She is also an excellent teacher. We are very pleased to recommend the appointment of Caryl Flinn as professor of screen arts and cultures, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective September 1, 2011.

Katherine L. French

Professor of History, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

With Tenure

September 1, 2011

University Year

On the recommendation of the Executive Committees of the Department of History and the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the appointment of Katherine L. French as professor of history, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective September 1, 2011.

ACADEMIC DEGREES

Katherine French received her Bachelor of Arts from Carleton College in 1984. She attended the University of Minnesota where she completed her Master of Arts in 1989 and Doctorate in 1993.

PROFESSIONAL RECORD

Professor French began her teaching career as an assistant professor at the State University of New York, New Paltz in 1993 and was promoted through the ranks to professor in 2008.

SUMMARY OF EVALUATION

Professor French’s research focuses on the late Middle Ages of British history and includes the history of women, gender, and the family, religion, and material culture. She is a very productive scholar who has written two books, edited a third, and co-edited a two-volume teaching anthology. She has also authored a long list of articles in prestigious journals, such as Gender and History, the Journal of Interdisciplinary History, and Sixteenth Century Journal. Professor French has received fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities, Harvard Divinity School, and the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton University.

Professor French is a conscientious and successful instructor who has taught on an array of medieval topics exposing students to primary sources and to the latest research and films. She is a dedicated and effective teacher to undergraduate students who will play an important role in energizing the department’s future undergraduate curriculum, anchoring the British and European fields.
EXCERPTS FROM EXTERNAL LETTERS

Reviewer (A)
“Both of Katherine’s monographs would be noted as significant books in the field of late medieval English religious history... It is important to note that these would also be noted on lists of important books in the field of late medieval English social history - the point again is that she has brought two fields into productive dialogue.”

Reviewer (B)
“Professor French is a skilled historian of late medieval England, with a specialty in the records kept by late medieval parishes. Professor French has carried a heavy load of teaching and service... but this has not obstructed her scholarship... In terms of both output and quality, she stands on equal ground with the best of her peers...”

Reviewer (C)
“...French’s work comes across as solid and workmanlike. ...[she] is a capable craftsman. She gets the job done, and does it steadily, efficiently, reliably, punctually, and well.”

Reviewer (D)
“Katherine is arguably second to none in her command of the subject of women and religion in late medieval England. When the field is extended to all aspects of late medieval British women’s history, she would be in the top five of all scholars currently working...she will be an outstanding graduate advisor. ...In addition to her depth of field knowledge and the respect with which her work is held, she will bring her outstanding networking skills to bear to help her students.”

Reviewer (E)
“Because Professor French has long worked in London, Westminster and West Country archives, she has a very good sense of ‘what is out there,’ and what kinds of questions might be answered from archival material. As a consequence she will be an excellent graduate mentor and dissertation advisor.”

Reviewer (F)
“...French is very dynamic... She is an excellent person to build a graduate program... She has achieved a record that would be very respectable at any institution, but is truly outstanding for someone not teaching in a PhD program...”

Reviewer (G)
“Because of her work we now have a clearer sense of how far and in what ways people across the social spectrum, including women, took part in funding, maintenance, commemoration, celebration, and the other activities that defined the parish community.”

Reviewer (H)
“As a teacher, mentor, and scholar, Dr. French would make a wonderful addition to Michigan’s faculty. Her wide-ranging interests, which spread both temporally and thematically over the historical terrain and interdisciplinarily into other medieval and early modern fields, make her an invaluable addition to your department.”

PUBLICATIONS

SUMMARY

Professor French is an outstanding scholar in her field. She also has a strong commitment to teaching. We are very pleased to recommend the appointment of Katherine L. French as professor of history, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective September 1, 2011.

ACTION REQUEST: Faculty Appointment Approval

NAME: Patricia Hall

TITLE: Professor of Music, School of Music, Theatre & Dance

TENURE STATUS: With Tenure

EFFECTIVE DATE: September 1, 2011

APPOINTMENT PERIOD: University Year

With the unanimous support of the School of Music, Theatre & Dance Executive Committee, I enthusiastically recommend the appointment of Patricia Hall as professor of music, with tenure, School of Music, Theatre & Dance, effective September 1, 2011.

ACADEMIC DEGREES
Professor Hall holds a B.A. degree in psychology from the University of California, Berkeley, a M.A. in music theory from Columbia University, and a Ph.D. in music theory from Yale University.

PROFESSIONAL RECORD
Professor Hall's teaching career began as a teaching assistant at Columbia University, an acting instructor at Yale University, and an instructor at Mills College. Since 1985, Professor Hall has progressed through the ranks at the University of California, Santa Barbara holding numerous appointments as visiting lecturer, acting assistant professor, visiting professor at the University of California Santa Barbara Center in Washington, D.C., and advancing to an assistant professor in 1990. In 1995, Professor Hall was promoted to associate professor, with tenure. She was recently approved for promotion to the rank of professor of music at University of California, Santa Barbara effective September 1, 2011.

SUMMARY OF EVALUATION
Professor Hall's strengths in teaching were observed during her visit to campus. The ability to bring relevancy and meaning to the study of music theory is a valuable and welcome ability that both students and colleagues appreciate. Professor Hall expresses and has demonstrated a strong commitment to the teaching not only of advanced students in theory, but to the broader population of the School including performers in their required theory curriculum. She was described as capable and approachable, and she received positive student feedback during her visit. The department believes that her intelligence, thoughtfulness and personal warmth augur well for her prospects and success as chair of the department, as well as a long-term colleague.
EXCERPTS FROM EXTERNAL REVIEWS
Reviewer A: “Given the depth and intensity of her engagement with Berg’s music, it is very impressive to see how she has also established other teaching and research areas that thrust her right into the center of some of the most urgent questions in musical scholarship. Professor Hall is clearly a scholar who continues to grow and develop in exciting and important ways.”

Reviewer B: “From my knowledge of Pat Hall’s published output, I have no hesitation in describing her research record as excellent and her work as being of considerable scholarly value and importance.”

Reviewer C: “Professor Hall is well known for her important contributions to the field of sketch studies, with special emphasis on the sketches of two major operatic works of the twentieth century. Professor Hall will be a wonderful colleague.”

Reviewer D: “Aside from her scholarly work, Professor Hall has an excellent reputation as a teacher with the field of undergraduate music theory. Colleagues who work with Pat attest to her excellent organization abilities and above all, her skills in dealing with interpersonal relationships.”

Reviewer E: “Over the course of more than twenty years in the field, Hall has produced a substantial body of scholarly work, impressive both for its quantity – evidence of energetic, sustained endeavor – and its uniformly high quality. In addition to her scholarly achievements, Hall has been a model citizen and leader in the field of music theory. By virtue of her scholarly record and her institutional leadership, Pat Hall is universally acknowledged as an important and influential senior figure in the field of music theory.”

Reviewer F: “As a scholar, Dr. Hall has established herself as what I consider to be a superstar in research on composer, Alban Berg. Dr. Hall has produced a body of work that probably comes as close to definitive as is possible in sketch studies of this kind.”

Reviewer G: “Because she writes so clearly, her insights reach well beyond music theoretical circles. She will clearly continue to make contributions to the profession for many years to come.”

PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITY
An internationally recognized scholar, Professor Hall continues a line of scholarly inquiry that she has been following for three decades, Alban Berg’s sketches for Wozzeck. She has clearly developed a unique familiarity with the subject, on which she has published a book that is scheduled for publication in March 2011, by the Oxford University Press. Moreover, Berg is not her only scholarly interest; she has done serious work on film music that resulted in a conference presentation at a recent American Musicological Society meeting. Professor Hall has another publication scheduled for publication in 2012, The Oxford Handbook of Music Censorship, in the Music and Politics electronic journal, of which she is the editor.
SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATION
Professor Patricia Hall has an outstanding profile, particularly with regard to scholarly research and her work in administration. She will be among a very small group of senior research scholars at the School, especially those who have the administrative experience to also serve as head of the Department of Music Theory. We believe she will be a significant asset to the School, and across the University. On behalf of the School of Music, Theatre & Dance, I am pleased to recommend the appointment of Patricia Hall as professor of music, with tenure, School of Music, Theatre & Dance, effective September 1, 2011.

THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN
REGENTS COMMUNICATION

ACTION REQUEST: Faculty Appointment Approval

NAME: M. Sile O’Modhrain

TITLE: Associate Professor of Music, School of Music, Theatre & Dance

TENURE STATUS: With Tenure

EFFECTIVE DATE: September 1, 2011

APPOINTMENT PERIOD: University Year

With the unanimous support of the School of Music, Theatre & Dance Executive Committee, I enthusiastically recommend the appointment of M. Sile O’Modhrain as associate professor of music, with tenure, School of Music, Theatre & Dance, effective September 1, 2011.

ACADEMIC DEGREES
Professor O’Modhrain earned a B.A. in music and a Licentiate in piano teaching from Trinity College in Dublin, Ireland. She also holds a M.S. in music technology from the University of York, York, England, and a Ph.D. in computer-based music theory from Stanford University, Stanford, California. Additionally, Professor O’Modhrain received a Postgraduate Certificate in higher education and training from Queen’s University in Belfast, Ireland.

PROFESSIONAL RECORD
Professor O’Modhrain has worked as a researcher and faculty member in the U.S. and Europe at the prestigious MIT Media Lab, Media Lab Europe, and is currently a senior lecturer - the equivalent of a tenured associate professor - and research director of the Sonic Arts Research Center at Queen’s University of Belfast. She has also worked for the BBC as an audio engineer and studio manager.

SUMMARY OF EVALUATION
Professor O’Modhrain has had much success teaching undergraduate students and mentoring graduate students, and offers a unique area of research with an established track record of outstanding work. During Professor O’Modhrain’s visit to campus, she presented a lecture on a specific area of psychoacoustics: critical bands and masking. Her explanations of this difficult topic were clear and precise, and she employed appropriate audio examples to emphasize specific auditory phenomena. The pacing of her teaching talk was highly appropriate to the material and she thoroughly engaged the students with her presentation.
EXCERPTS FROM EXTERNAL REVIEWS
Reviewer A: “Sile is an excellent researcher with a good research profile. She is well known in the human-computer interaction community and has a good international reputation and has worked with some of the top people in the field. She has a good and sustained publication record with papers in some top journals and conferences.”

Reviewer B: “Sile’s CV indicates the broad range of experience she has gained in a relatively short time, not only in academia but also, for example, working for the BBC. Her success is evidenced by the awards she has gained and by her employment in a number of leading institutions in her field of research. I see no reason why she should not go on to build further on an already impressive career.”

Reviewer C: “Dr. O’Modhrain is without doubt one of the leading figures in the area of musical haptics. Her work has been recognized worldwide, as is evident in her publications, keynote addresses and research awards; as well as in her standing as referee and expert reviewer for key grant awarding bodies, conference panels and highly reputable publications.”

Reviewer D: “Dr. O’Modhrain is a recognized leader in the field of interaction design, using and inventing interfaces that incorporate haptic and auditory feedback. In this field she has made fundamental and lasting contributions that are consistently characterized by cleverness, respect for the biological constraints of users, and above all, an exceptional creativity that has inspired many.”

Reviewer E: “Sile is a remarkable person in many respects. There is the salient fact that she is one of a small number of researchers who, being denied sight, choose to pursue research in related topics such as touch. There is her unusual and powerful combination of interests that cut across science, technology, and art. Then there are Sile’s personal attributes: a highly creative and analytical mind, a strong work ethic, and a delightful personality.”

Reviewer F: “Sile has been trained in top institutions in three countries and has worked again at top institutions from the very start of her career. She has received important research funding and many of her publications are with top journals/publishers.”

Reviewer G: “Dr. O’Modhrain is of the highest caliber whose contributions to teaching, scholarship, creative potential and service are internationally recognized. By joining the faculty at the University of Michigan, Dr. O’Modhrain will build upon her past achievements and excel in her future endeavor.”

PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITY
Professor O’Modhrain’s research focus is on haptics (touch and gesture) and its relationship to music performance and the development of new interfaces for technology-enhanced instruments that extend the boundaries of musical expression. Also impressive is her combination of experience in many areas related to audio, psychoacoustics, computer music, cognition, and gestural control of music. She is internationally known and respected in her field, as evidenced by her record of scholarly accomplishment in well-regarded journals and as a frequent speaker at international conferences.
SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATION
The School of Music, Theatre & Dance Search Committee and the Executive Committee enthusiastically support the candidacy of Professor Sile O’Modhrain. She has an outstanding international profile, particularly with regard to a unique area of research, paired with formidable skills in the classroom. She will be a welcome addition to our Department of Performing Arts Technology as well as the University campus at large. On behalf of the School of Music, Theatre & Dance, I am pleased to recommend the appointment of M. Sile O’Modhrain as associate professor of music, with tenure, School of Music, Theatre & Dance, effective September 1, 2011.

On the recommendation of the Executive Committees of the Department of Screen Arts and Cultures and the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the appointment of Matthew Solomon as associate professor of screen arts and cultures, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective September 1, 2011.

ACADEMIC DEGREES

Matthew Solomon received his Bachelor of Arts from Carleton College in 1993. He attended the University of California, Los Angeles where he completed his Master of Arts in 1995 and his Doctorate in film and television critical studies in 2001.

PROFESSIONAL RECORD

Professor Solomon began his teaching career as a visiting assistant professor at Indiana University in Bloomington (2001-2002) before joining the faculty at the College of Staten Island as an assistant professor (2002-2008). He was appointed as a visiting professor in film studies at the City University of New York (CUNY) Graduate Center (2008) and as an associate professor of cinema studies at the College of Staten Island, CUNY (2009-present).

SUMMARY OF EVALUATION

Professor Solomon is one of the top scholars in his field and does outstanding work in nineteenth- and early twentieth-century American and European cinema. His publishing record is impressive and includes a book, an edited volume that is forthcoming, and sixteen articles and book chapters. He has been active in his field serving as associate editor of Cinema Journal and as book review editor for Nineteenth-Century Theatre and Film. He is in high demand to speak at international conferences and at major universities, which confirms that he is on the leading edge of his generation of early film scholars.
Professor Solomon has an excellent reputation as a teacher. He has taught a variety of course topics on early cinema from surveys to specialized courses, and student evaluations confirm his success in the classroom. He has served on eleven thesis committees (four as advisor) and has directed undergraduate and graduate studies at CUNY.

EXCERPTS FROM EXTERNAL LETTERS

Reviewer (A)
“What Solomon brings to the table is a basic grounding in material history, especially in nineteenth and early twentieth century American and European [history]. ... He has a command of the relevant art-historical and social factors that give his work substance, breadth and depth.”

Reviewer (B)
“In addition to his publications, Solomon has also contributed valuable service to the field as Associate Editor of Cinema Journal, the premiere English-language journal in media studies, and as Book Review Editor for Film for Nineteenth Century Theatre and Film. These appointments suggest the considerable esteem in which Solomon’s peers hold his work…”

Reviewer (C)
“Solomon is simply the finest and most thorough scholar of cinema and magic writing in English. ...[his] essays and the monograph place Solomon not only as a major emerging scholar in film studies (and in the broader cultural horizon), but as the established authority in a specialized field, that of film magic. ...he has made it clear that it is an area with contemporary echoes (the relation of early trick cinema to today’s special effects) and to broad social issues (such as Houdini’s redefinition of celebrity via cinema).”

Reviewer (D)
“His knowledge of magic is extensive and deep, and exceeds that of anyone else I know within the field of cinema studies. ... In his ten years publishing early cinema scholarship, Matthew Solomon has firmly established himself as a leading figure in the field. ...he has identified himself as an historiographically astute researcher who is equally comfortable writing about American or French cinema, who is conversant with major currents of thought in both film history and film theory, and who has carved out an identity for himself that no one else can encroach upon.”

Reviewer (E)
“His work is visible, and admirable; it has great depth and breadth; he is already a significant voice in the field and this will only develop further.”

Reviewer (F)
“The forthcoming collection, Fantastic Voyages of the Cinematic Imagination: Georges Méliès’s Trip to the Moon, will most certainly put Prof. Solomon on the map as one of the if not the preeminent American scholars of the French magician-filmmaker. ... The table of contents is itself a ‘who’s who’ of international early cinema scholars.”
PUBLICATIONS

Disappearing Tricks: Silent Film, Houdini, and the New Magic of the Twentieth Century, University of Illinois Press, 2010.

SUMMARY

Professor Solomon is one of the top scholars in the classical cinema era and is an exciting teacher. We are very pleased to recommend the appointment of Matthew Solomon as associate professor of screen arts and cultures, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective September 1, 2011.

Recommendations for approval of reappointments of regular instructional staff and selected academic administrative staff
THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN
REGENTS COMMUNICATION

ACTION REQUEST: Approval of Reappointment to an Endowed Professorship

NAME: Gautam Ahuja

CURRENT TITLES: Harvey C. Fruehauf Professor of Business Administration, and Professor of Corporate Strategy and International Business, with tenure, Stephen M. Ross School of Business

TITLE BEING RENEWED: Harvey C. Fruehauf Professor of Business Administration, Stephen M. Ross School of Business

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

On the recommendation of the Dean and Executive Committee of the Stephen M. Ross School of Business, we are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Gautam Ahuja as the Harvey C. Fruehauf Professor of Business Administration, Stephen M. Ross School of Business, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

The Harvey C. Fruehauf Professor of Business Administration was established in 1992 to help increase knowledge and understanding of business and economic theory and practice through instruction and research in these and related fields. Additionally, appointment to this professorship is reserved for a senior faculty member who can provide immediate and continuing prominence to the Harvey C. Fruehauf Professorship and prestige to the Stephen M. Ross School of Business. Funding for this professorship is provided by the trustees of the Fruehauf Foundation.

Professor Ahuja received his BA degree with honors from Delhi University in 1984, his MBA degree from the Indian Institute of Management in 1986, and his PhD degree from the University of Michigan in 1996. Upon completion of his PhD, Professor Ahuja joined the faculty of the University of Texas at Austin as an assistant professor. He joined the Stephen M. Ross School of Business in 2001 as associate professor of corporate strategy and international business and was promoted to professor, with tenure, in 2003. He currently serves as the area chair of strategy.

Professor Ahuja addresses important substantive issues in strategy and organization theory, typically working with a data set that he developed with exceptional care. His papers explicate methodological issues very well, often contain original conceptual ideas, and are well argued and written. He is one of the contributors to serious behavioral literature in the area of technology-related strategy issues. He has proven his capacity to publish in top journals in both organization and strategy, a pattern that enriches both strategy and organization theory. Professor Ahuja also received the Senior Faculty Research Award in 2010.
Professor Ahuja is one of our finest teachers. During his career, he has received numerous teaching awards including most recently the PhD Teaching Excellence Award and the MBA Teaching Excellence Award in 2010. He was also named Best Professor in the MBA Program in 2003 and 2004 and in the PhD program in 2004 at Michigan. He has been recognized in Business Week’s annual guide to the top business schools.

Professor Ahuja’s research on innovation and technology strategy has received several international awards including the Free Press Award for outstanding research in Strategy, the Sage-Pondy and West Publishing Awards for Organization Theory, and the Best Dissertation Award from The Institute for Operations Research and the Management Sciences. His work has also been cited by bodies such as the EPA, OECD and UNEP, and profiled in Sloan Management Review. He is an associate editor for Management Science, senior editor for Organization Science and Editorial Board member for AMR, ASQ, and SO.

We believe that Gautam Ahuja exemplifies the criteria outlined for appointment to the Harvey C. Fruehauf Professorship. Therefore, we are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Gautam Ahuja as the Harvey C. Fruehauf Professor of Business Administration, Stephen M. Ross School of Business, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

ACTION REQUEST: Approval of Reappointment to a Collegiate Professorship

NAME: Michael Awkward

CURRENT TITLES: Gayl A. Jones Collegiate Professor of Afro-American Literature and Culture, Professor of English Language and Literature, with tenure, and Professor of Afroamerican and African Studies, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TITLE BEING RENEWED: Gayl A. Jones Collegiate Professor of Afro-American Literature and Culture, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TERM: Five Years, Renewable

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

On the recommendation of the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Michael Awkward as the Gayl A. Jones Collegiate Professor of Afro-American Literature and Culture, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

Gayl A. Jones was a faculty member at the University of Michigan from 1976 to 1984. The Gayl A. Jones Collegiate Professorship in Afro-American Literature and Culture was established by the Regents in August 2006. A stipend funded from College resources accompanies this professorship.

Michael Awkward’s remarkable productivity and impact, combined with his impressive service record and commitment to teaching all support our request to renew his appointment to the Jones Collegiate Professorship. In the last five years he has published two books and is nearing research on a third. His important study of a signal strain in African-American music, Soul Covers: Rhythm and Blues Remakes and the Struggle for Artistic Identity was published by Duke University Press in 2007. He also published Burying Don Imus: Anatomy of a Scapegoat with the University of Minnesota Press in 2009. The third book is entitled Philadelphia Freedoms: Traumatized Black American Identities in the Post-Civil Rights Era and is under contract with Temple University Press. This last book will cement his position as one of the leading intellectuals of twentieth-century African American life. It will be his sixth monograph and along with his collection of essays represents a remarkable body of work.

Professor Awkward has taken several successful leaps in teaching as well. His course on Oprah’s book club has become a student favorite and regularly enrolls more than 100 students.
His courses in twentieth-century African-American literature and culture are models of rigorous and cutting-edge scholarly inquiry.

Lastly, Professor Awkward has been an exemplary citizen serving the department, the college, and the university with distinction. He has served on the Executive Board of the University of Michigan Press. His colleagues in the English department have elected him to two terms on the Executive Committee and he has agreed to serve a one-year term as interim chair of Graduate Studies.

We are very pleased to recommend the reappointment of Michael Awkward as the Gayl A. Jones Collegiate Professor of Afro-American Literature and Culture, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Derek B. Collins as associate dean for the humanities, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.

Derek Collins received his B.A (1987) and M.A. (1991) from the University of California, Los Angeles, and his Ph.D. (1997) from Harvard University. Professor Collins then taught for two years at the University of Texas at Austin as an assistant professor, joining the University of Michigan as an assistant professor in 1999. In 2004 he was promoted to associate professor and was recently promoted to professor effective September 2008. Professor Collins received the LSA Excellence in Education Award in 2007 and the Class of 1923 Memorial Teaching Award in 2004. He has been awarded fellowships by the Ford Foundation, the Institute for the Humanities at UM, and the Harvard Center for Hellenic Studies in Washington, D.C.

Professor Collins’ research interests focus on Greek poetry and its performance, Greek religion, and the history of magic and witchcraft. He has published three books and more than a dozen articles. He has been a member of the College’s Curriculum Committee, director of admissions on the College’s Office of Undergraduate Admissions Advisory Committee, and served for two years as co-chair of the President’s Initiative on Ethics in Public Life. Professor Collins also served on the Faculty Budgetary Advisory Committee to the Provost, the University Management Bargaining Team to the Provost, and as chair of the Task Force on Non-Traditional Education Program to the Provost. He currently serves as a member of the Academic Human Resources Advisory Committee.

We are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Derek B. Collins as associate dean for the humanities, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Herbert J. Eagle as chair, Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.

Herbert Eagle received his Bachelor of Science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1963. He attended the University of Michigan where he earned his Master of Arts in 1969 and Doctorate in 1973. Professor Eagle began his teaching career as an assistant professor at Purdue University in 1973 and joined our faculty as an associate professor, with tenure, in 1978. He has served as director of the Program in Film and Video Studies (1981-1988) as well as interim director (1988-1989, 2003, 2005) and director (1989-1996) of the Residential College. He has also served as chair of the Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures since January 2007.

Professor Eagle has primary research interests in twentieth-century Russian and East European film and literature, and in the semiotics of art and culture. He has an abiding interest in verse theory, and his articles on the structures which pattern “free verse” forms in twentieth-century Russian and Czech poetry have appeared in a number of journals and anthologies.

We are very pleased to recommend the reappointment of Herbert J. Eagle as chair, Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.

NAME: Geoff Eley

CURRENT TITLES: Karl Pohrt Distinguished University Professor of Contemporary History, Professor of History, with tenure, and Chair, Department of History, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TITLE BEING RENEWED: Chair, Department of History, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TERM: Two Years

EFFECTIVE DATES: July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2013

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Geoff Eley as chair, Department of History, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2013.

Geoff Eley earned his Bachelor of Arts at Oxford University in 1970 and Doctorate from Sussex University in 1973. He was a lecturer at Keele University in 1974 and was appointed as a college lecturer, fellow, and director of studies in history at the University of Cambridge in 1975. Professor Eley joined our faculty as an assistant professor in 1979 and was promoted through the ranks to professor in 1986. He was chair of the Department of Germanic Languages and Literatures from 2004 to 2006. Professor Eley received the John H. D’Arms Award for Distinguished Graduate Mentoring in the Humanities in 2005 and the University of Michigan University Press Book Award in 2006. He is a regular advisor for Oxford University Press.

Professor Eley has worked tirelessly to open faculty and students to an interdisciplinary terrain between the social sciences and the humanities. He was co-founder of the Program in Comparative Studies of Social Transformations which began in 1987. Professor Eley was the principal architect of cooperation in the field of German studies, a stalwart of the long effort to create a viable Center for Western European Studies, and acting director of the Program in Film and Video Studies in 2002. He served on the Augmented Executive Committee of the Department of History from 2004 to 2005.

We are very pleased to recommend the reappointment of Geoff Eley as chair, Department of History, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2013.

Kathleen Coulborn Faller

Professor of Social Work, with tenure, and Marion Elizabeth Blue Professor of Children and Families

Marion Elizabeth Blue Professor of Children and Families, School of Social Work

September 1, 2011 through May 31, 2014

With the approval of the executive committee of the School of Social Work, I am pleased to recommend the reappointment of Kathleen Coulborn Faller as the Marion Elizabeth Blue Professor of Children and Families, School of Social Work, effective September 1, 2011 through May 31, 2014.

Through the generosity of Ann Lurie and her children, the University established the Marion Elizabeth Blue Professorship at the School of Social Work in October 1997.

Professor Faller received a Master of Social Work in 1971 and a Ph.D. in social work and psychology in 1981, both from the University of Michigan. She spent 1973-1974 taking an advanced course in Family and Marital Treatment, at the Institute for Group Analysis in London, England. Since completing her education and training, Professor Faller has been an assistant professor (1982-1988), an associate professor (1988-1992), and a professor (1992-present) at the School of Social Work, University of Michigan in addition to directing and/or co-directing programs on child abuse and neglect.

Professor Faller is a professor of social work, director of the Family Assessment Clinic, principal investigator of the Interdisciplinary Child Welfare Training Program, and principal investigator on the Training Program for Child Welfare Supervisors and the Hasbro Early Assessment Project. Her research interests lie in the area of child welfare, and include: research on interview techniques for possible sexual abuse, decision-making in child sexual abuse, and understanding different subcategories of sexual abuse, such as female perpetration, sexual abuse in divorce, and sexual abuse in daycare contexts. In addition, she is interested in the co-occurrence of child maltreatment, substance abuse, mental illness, and domestic violence and is a frequent and often-requested presenter, both locally and nationally, for professionals interested in child welfare.
The many accomplishments of Professor Faller have brought recognition and honor to the School of Social Work and to the University of Michigan. It is fitting that she should be recommended for appointment to recognize her many contributions to the School, the University, the community, and the profession. I am, therefore, pleased to recommend the reappointment of Kathleen Coulborn Faller as the Marion Elizabeth Blue Professor of Children and Families, School of Social Work, effective September 1, 2011 through May 31, 2014.

CURRENT TITLES: Edward Sapir Collegiate Professor of Linguistic Anthropology, and Professor of Anthropology, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TITLE BEING RENEWED: Edward Sapir Collegiate Professor of Linguistic Anthropology, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TERM: Five Years, Renewable

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

On the recommendation of the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Judith T. Irvine as the Edward Sapir Collegiate Professor of Linguistic Anthropology, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

Edward Sapir was a faculty member at the University of Michigan during the summer session in 1937. He is one of the founding figures of anthropology in the United States. The Edward Sapir Collegiate Professorship in Linguistic Anthropology was established by the Regents in August 2006. A stipend funded from College resources accompanies this professorship.

Professor Irvine continues to be a leading figure in linguistic anthropology and a major contributor to her subfield and in socio-cultural anthropology more broadly. At every phase of her career her work has shaped the direction of the field. Her articles and publications have often single-handedly spurred entirely novel research directions, becoming defining moments for the trajectory of linguistic anthropology. Her current work on language and colonialism promises a new watershed in this history of significant contributions. Despite her three-year term as chair of the Department of Anthropology (2006-2009), Professor Irvine has maintained an active publication record with 14 publications since her appointment to the Sapir Collegiate Professorship. She is in the process of co-authoring a book and was invited to join the editorial board of Oxford Bibliographies Online (Anthropology).

Professor Irvine remains very active in teaching, offering an important core graduate course every year and other theoretically essential graduate and undergraduate courses. She has been working with 34 dissertation writers, nineteen of whom have completed their doctorates. Of the committees she chaired or co-chaired, twelve graduate students have earned their degrees and eight are in progress toward degree. She also works with undergraduate honors students.
Professor Irvine has continued to be active in her department serving as interim director of graduate studies (fall term 2010) and chair or member of third year review and tenure committees. She has been active at the university level serving on the steering committee of the African Studies Center (2008-present), the Heritage Initiative committee (2009-present), the 2012 theme semester steering committee on language, and as a consultant for the Law School’s Human Trafficking Clinic. Her national service is also high-profile and includes service on the American Anthropological Association’s Commission on Governance (2005-2007) and work on two external review committees.

We are very pleased to recommend the reappointment of Judith T. Irvine as the Edward Sapir Collegiate Professor of Linguistic Anthropology, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

ACTION REQUEST: Reappointment of an Academic Administrative Appointment

NAME: Sharon R. Kardia

CURRENT TITLES: Professor of Epidemiology, with tenure, and Chair, Department of Epidemiology, School of Public Health

TITLE BEING RENEWED: Chair, Department of Epidemiology, School of Public Health

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2014

The Dean and Executive Committee of the School of Public Health are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Sharon R. Kardia as chair, Department of Epidemiology, School of Public Health, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2014.

Professor Kardia received a B.S. degree from Carnegie-Mellon University in 1985. She received her M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Michigan in 1990 and 1991, respectively. From 1994 to 1998, she held the position of assistant research scientist at the U of M Medical School. Professor Kardia joined the U of M School of Public Health faculty as assistant professor of epidemiology in 1998, was promoted to associate professor in 2003, and to professor in 2008. She has served as chair of the Department of Epidemiology since September 2008.

Professor Kardia is recognized as one of the most outstanding, innovative, and productive researchers in her field. Her research interests and reputation are based on her important genetic epidemiology studies to understand the genetic contribution to common diseases, including cardiovascular diseases and risk factors, cancers, and addictive behaviors. Professor Kardia has an outstanding record of obtaining external funding for her research, including significant funding as principal investigator from NIH. She is currently the PI of two large R01’s, the PI of a project within a Center grant, the PI of two subcontracts, the PI of two cores to provide statistical genetics support and the co-PI of two grants concerned with genetics and the community.

Professor Kardia is an innovative teacher, extremely well-liked by students. Her courses consistently receive excellent evaluations and she is a conscientious mentor to both masters and doctoral students. Her service activities at the national level have made important contributions to the field, while at the departmental level, she has served on the most demanding committees. Professor Kardia has served as the director of the Public Health Genetics Program since 2003, and has co-directed the Michigan Center for Genomics and Public Health. She also serves as co-director of the Life Sciences and Society Program.
Professor Kardia is highly respected by her colleagues, and has provided strong and effective leadership for the department. The Executive Committee and I are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Sharon R. Kardia as chair, Department of Epidemiology, School of Public Health, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2014.

Name: Vassilios Lambropoulos

Current Titles: C. P. Cavafy Professor of Modern Greek Studies, Professor of Modern Greek Studies, with tenure, Department of Classical Studies, and Professor of Comparative Literature, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

Title Being Renewed: C. P. Cavafy Professor of Modern Greek Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

Term: Five Years, Renewable

Effective Dates: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

On the recommendation of the Chair of the Department of Classical Studies and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Vassilios Lambropoulos as the C. P. Cavafy Professor of Modern Greek Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

As a result of a generous gift from the Foundation for Modern Greek Studies, the C. P. Cavafy Professor of Modern Greek Studies was established by the Regents in July 2001. This professorship is intended as a foundational element in the University’s commitment to Modern Greek studies, from elementary language sequence through advanced cultural studies.

Professor Lambropoulos has continued to maintain the highest standards as a scholar and teacher, and the Modern Greek Program he has nurtured along has flourished. The minor was created in 2002 and a concentration in 2004. There are now 13 concentrators in Modern Greek and there were 181 students enrolled in Modern Greek courses during winter 2011. The program is known nationally and has been featured in Greek newspapers.

Professor Lambropoulos has also continued to pursue a busy scholarly and teaching schedule. He published an important book in 2006 entitled The Tragic Idea, which explores how tragedy in modern times came to be not just as a literary genre but a way of thinking about the world. He has published eight scholarly articles in English and four in Greek, as well as frequent articles in the Greek press – he is a well-known public intellectual in Greece. He is currently at work on a new book on Hybris in modern drama.

Professor Lambropoulos serves on several editorial boards, including the Journal of Modern Greek Studies and A Journal of Transnational Studies. In academic year 2009-2010 he was a... chair or member of nine Ph.D. committees in Comparative Literature making him an essential contributor to the graduate program in that department.

We are very pleased to recommend the reappointment of Vassilios Lambropoulos as the C. P. Cavafy Professor of Modern Greek Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

NAME: Yang Liu, Ph.D.

CURRENT TITLES: Professor of Surgery, with tenure, Professor of Internal Medicine, without tenure, and Charles B. de Nançrêde Research Professor of Surgery, Medical School

TITLE BEING RENEWED: Charles B. de Nançrêde Research Professor of Surgery, Medical School

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

On the recommendation of Michael W. Mulholland, M.D., Ph.D., the Frederick A. Coller Distinguished Professor of Surgery and Chair of the Department of Surgery, and with the concurrence of the Executive Committee of the Medical School, I am pleased to recommend the reappointment of Yang Liu, Ph.D. as the Charles B. de Nançrêde Research Professor of Surgery, Medical School, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

This research professorship was established in July 2006 and intended to recognize an outstanding faculty member in the Department of Surgery for superior achievement in education, clinical care, and research. Dr. de Nançrêde came to the University of Michigan in 1889, where he pioneered surgical teaching methods, the use of x-ray technology and the use of anesthesia.

Dr. Liu is an internationally recognized leader in immunotherapy research and for his studies on the mechanism of antigen presentation by tumor cells and the co-stimulatory process in immune responses. He is principal investigator of several NIH grants and is well-published, having written 125 articles and two books. He holds five patents, and has presented at numerous national and international venues. He is the editor of Developmental and Clinical Immunology and on the editorial board for the Journal of Biological Chemistry.

Dr. Liu currently is the director of the Division of Immunotherapy, Section of General Surgery, and is a professor in the Departments of Surgery and Internal Medicine. He is also co-leader of the Tumor Immunology and Host Response Program for the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center.
Dr. Liu has made seminal contributions in the field and has been a mentor to several postdoctoral students, fellows and junior faculty. I am, therefore, pleased to recommend the reappointment of Yang Liu, Ph.D. as the Charles B. de Nancrede Research Professor of Surgery, Medical School, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

TITLE BEING RENEWED: Chair, Department of Asian Languages and Cultures, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TERM: Three Years

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Donald S. Lopez, Jr. as chair, Department of Asian Languages and Cultures, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.

Donald Lopez was educated at the University of Virginia (B.A., with high honors, 1974; M.A., 1977; and Ph.D., 1982). He joined the faculty at the University of Michigan in 1989 as a professor. Professor Lopez has transformed the field of Buddhist studies through his innovative approaches to both the traditions of and the scholarship on Buddhism. What distinguishes Professor Lopez from his peers is his ability to re-examine and challenge institutional approaches to his chosen subjects. He continues to reshape the field and has had worldwide impact both in academic and non-academic communities.

Professor Lopez has been awarded numerous national fellowship and honors, including the Templeton Foundation Award in 1997, a John Simon Guggenheim Fellowship in 2006, and a Getty Research Center Visiting Scholarship in 2007. He was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 2000. In 2005 he was appointed as director of the Institute for the Study of Buddhist Traditions. The University of Michigan awarded him an Arthur F. Thurnau Professorship in 1998, the Helmut F. Stern Distinguished Professor of Humanities at the Institute for the Humanities in 2003, the Arthur E. Link Distinguished University Professorship in 2005, chair of the Michigan Society of Fellows in 2006, and the John H. ACTION REQUEST: Approval of Reappointment to a Collegiate Professorship

NAME: Arthur Lupia

CURRENT TITLES: Hal R. Varian Collegiate Professor of Political Science, and Professor of Political Science, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TITLE BEING RENEWED: Hal R. Varian Collegiate Professor of Political Science, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TERM: Five Years, Renewable

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

On the recommendation of the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Arthur Lupia as the Hal R. Varian Collegiate Professor of Political Science, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

Hal Varian was a faculty member at the University of Michigan from 1977 to 1996. The Hal R. Varian Collegiate Professorship in Political Science was established by the Regents in August 2006. A stipend funded from College resources accompanies this professorship.

Professor Lupia has been remarkably productive in research, teaching, and service. He has completed two edited volumes, Positive Changes in Political Science (University of Michigan Press, 2007) and The Cambridge Handbook of Experimental Political Science (Cambridge University Press, forthcoming 2011), which is the first of its kind in the discipline. This book, in coordination with a conference held in 2009, brought together leading practitioners from all of political science’s experimental traditions. The interaction led to rigorous and constructive work on best practices and on ways that various traditions could leverage strengths of the others. Science magazine is working on an article about this book that will appear near its release date. He has also published a range of articles on political decision-making.

Professor Lupia is responsible for teaching intermediate game theory, in which graduate students learn the mathematical underpinnings of modern game theory. Under his tutelage, game theoretic training has evolved to provide students with better training in this area. He redesigned the course in 2009 to make it a second course in a three-course sequence. He has also developed two new courses. The first exposes students to the production side of major surveys and it has already produced a student publication in a leading journal. The second is an undergraduate course on persuasive politics designed to improve students’ own persuasive skills. This class is highly rated and in very high demand. Professor Lupia works with graduate students in many departments and has published eleven scholarly articles with graduate students.
Professor Lupia has served on a number of committees across campus, including the Institute for Social Research, the Survey Research Center, the Institute for Social Research, and Political Science. He has taken on a wide range of leadership and service responsibilities for the discipline, including principal investigator for three grants, treasurer of the American Political Science Association (2009-present), and co-editor of the American Political Science Review (2009). He has also worked on behalf of many academic organizations in service and advisory positions, and served as reviewer for dozens of academic journals, academic presses, and national science foundations from many nations.

We are very pleased to recommend the reappointment of Arthur Lupia as the Hal R. Varian Collegiate Professor of Political Science, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

NAME: Arvind-Pal S. Mandair

CURRENT TITLES: Tara Singh and Balwant Kaur Chattha and Gurbax Singh and Kirpal Kaur Brar Sikh Studies Professor, and Assistant Professor of Asian Languages and Cultures, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TITLE BEING RENEWED: Tara Singh and Balwant Kaur Chattha and Gurbax Singh and Kirpal Kaur Brar Sikh Studies Professor, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TERM: Five Years, Renewable

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

On the recommendation of the Chair of the Department of Classical Studies and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Arvind-Pal S. Mandair as the Tara Singh and Balwant Kaur Chattha and Gurbax Singh and Kirpal Kaur Brar Sikh Studies Professor, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

As a result of a generous gift from Dr. Amrik Singh Chattha and Dr. Jaswinder Kaur Chattha, the University of Michigan, the Tara Singh and Balwant Kaur Chattha and Gurbax Singh and Kirpal Kaur Brar Sikh Studies Professor was established by the Regents in July 1997. This professorship is in honor of their deceased parents.

Professor Mandair is a highly productive and innovative scholar whose work on Sikh studies and critical religious studies has had significant impact on the field in the United States and abroad. His published monograph, Religion and the Specter of the West (Columbia University Press, 2009) has established him at the top in the field of Sikh studies.

Over the past five years, Professor Mandair has expanded the scope of his research in Sikhism and has attracted a large and wide range of students. He has also demonstrated a remarkable ability to teach a number of courses that do not focus on Sikhism. “Introduction to Asian Religion” is an important component of the undergraduate curriculum. The course has become one of his regular offerings and he has attracted large enrollments and received strong course evaluations. He has also taught the junior/senior colloquium with success and has attracted strong applicants to the graduate program.
Professor Mandair's service contributions to the department and to the profession are excellent and include three terms on the departmental Executive Committee, and one term on the Graduate Program and Curriculum committees. He founded the University’s Sikh Studies Forum and has contributed to the Center for South Asian Studies. He has also contributed significantly to his profession where he has been instrumental in the establishment of an international Sikh studies conversation through his journal, Sikh Formations, and more locally with the Michigan Sikh Studies Forum.

We are very pleased to recommend the reappointment of Arvind-Pal S. Mandair as the Tara Singh and Balwant Kaur Chattha and Gurbax Singh and Kirpal Kaur Brar Sikh Studies Professor, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

Director, Jean and Samuel Frankel Center for Judaic Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

Four Years

July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2015

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Deborah Dash Moore as director, Jean and Samuel Frankel Center for Judaic Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2015.

Professor Moore earned her Bachelor of Arts, magna cum laude, with honors in history, from Brandeis University in 1967. From Columbia University, she earned her Masters of Arts in 1968 and Doctorate in 1975. Professor Moore remains a highly respected Jewish historian and Jewish studies scholar. Her work on Jewish immigration, gender, and most recently American Jewish identity politics is internationally recognized as having made a significant contribution to modern Jewish studies. Her recent book, GI Jews: How World War II Changed a Generation (2004), was named a Washington Post Best Book of the Year award in 2005. Other awards include the Marshall Sklare Award from the Association for the Scientific Study of Jewry (2006) and The Ohio State University granted her a Distinguished Humanist Award (2007). Professor Moore continues to play a prominent professional role in the national and international communities, as evidenced by the constant demand she is in to give invited presentations, to consult, and to serve on the editorial boards of the major journals in her field.

We are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Deborah Dash Moore as director, Jean and Samuel Frankel Center for Judaic Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2015.

Title Being Renewed: John Derby Evans Professor of Media Technology, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

Term: Five Years, Renewable

Effective Dates: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

On the recommendation of the Chair of the Department of Communication Studies and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the reappointment of W. Russell Neuman as the John Derby Evans Professor of Media Technology, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

As a result of a generous gift from the John D. Evans Fund, the John Derby Evans Professorship in Media Technology was established by the Regents in August 2001. This professorship is intended to ensure that research and study in media technology become a permanent part of the college.

Professor Neuman has maintained his robust and nationally recognized record of scholarship as well as his service to the discipline and to his department. In the last five years he has published two books, The Affect Effect: The Dynamics of Emotion in Political Thinking and Behavior (co-edited volume, University of Chicago Press, 2007) and Media, Technology, and Society: Theories of Media Evolution (edited volume, University of Michigan Press, 2010). He is currently working on a third sole-authored book entitled The Structure of Communication. He has published on average three journal articles or book chapters a year, often with graduate students. He presents regularly at the leading conferences in his field and received the Murray Edelman Distinguished Career Award from the American Political Science Associations, Political Communication Section. He is currently principal investigator on a National Science Foundation grant on deliberative citizenship.

Professor Neuman has maintained his commitment to teaching at the undergraduate and graduate levels. He regularly teaches graduate and undergraduate courses, including large lecture courses. He is also a much sought after mentor and advisor to Ph.D. students and a challenging mentor to junior faculty members.
We are very pleased to recommend the reappointment of W. Russell Neuman to the John Derby Evans Professor of Media Technology, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

TITLE BEING RENEWED: John Alexander Distinguished Professor of Thoracic Surgery, Medical School

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

On the recommendation of Michael W. Mulholland, M.D., Ph.D., the Frederick A. Coller Distinguished Professor and Chair of the Department of Surgery, and with the concurrence of the Executive Committee of the Medical School, I am pleased to recommend the reappointment of Mark B. Orringer, M.D. as the John Alexander Distinguished Professor of Thoracic Surgery, Medical School, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

The John Alexander Distinguished Professorship in Thoracic Surgery was established in 1996 as a memorial to Dr. John Alexander, long regarded as the father of American thoracic surgery. He served as the first head of the Section of Thoracic Surgery at the University of Michigan from 1928 until his death in 1954. Dr. Alexander initiated the first thoracic surgery residency training program in the United States at the University of Michigan in 1928.

Dr. Orringer is internationally recognized for his work with esophageal disease. He is one of the country’s most recognized leaders in the field of general thoracic surgery, having re-developed the transhiatal esophagectomy operative technique. Dr. Orringer has the largest reported patient population in the nation for this operative technique. He has published over 250 articles, six books, and written 129 book chapters. His expertise in the field is evidenced by over 250 invited presentations nationally and internationally. Institutionally, Dr. Orringer is on the board of directors for the Faculty Group Practice, and is head of the Section of General Thoracic Surgery and is the thoracic oncology program director of the Cancer Center. Nationally, he has served as chair of the nominating committee of The Society of Thoracic Surgeons, is a member of the Residency Review Committee for Thoracic Surgery, and is on the board of governors for the American College of Surgeons. Dr. Orringer is mentoring director for the Surgical Subspecialties for first and second year medical students, and is a staff physician at the Veterans Administration Hospital.
Dr. Orringer is highly regarded as a great teacher, outstanding clinician, and a leader in his field. It is with great pleasure, therefore, to recommend the reappointment of Mark B. Orringer, M.D. as the John Alexander Distinguished Professor of Thoracic Surgery, Medical School, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

Professor Owen-Smith received his B.A. from the New College of Florida in 1995. He attended the University of Arizona where he completed his M.A. in 1997 and his Ph.D. in 2000. Professor Owen-Smith began his teaching career by joining our faculty as an assistant professor in the Department of Sociology and Program in Organizational Studies in 2002, and was later promoted to associate professor in 2008. Professor Owen-Smith’s work lies at the intersection of institutional change, network dynamics, innovation, high-technology industries, university research commercialization, and regional economic development. The numerous awards and grants that Professor Owen-Smith has received attest to his devotion to these fields.

We are very pleased to recommend the reappointment of Jason Owen-Smith as director, Program in Organizational Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2012.

NAME: Mark D. Pearlman, M.D.

CURRENT TITLES: Professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology, with tenure, Professor of Surgery, without tenure, and S. Jan Behrman Collegiate Professor of Reproductive Medicine, Medical School

TITLE BEING RENEWED: S. Jan Behrman Collegiate Professor of Reproductive Medicine, Medical School

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

On the recommendation of Timothy R.B. Johnson, M.D., the Arthur F. Thurnau Professor, the Bates Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Chair of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, and with the concurrence of the Executive Committee of the Medical School, I am pleased to recommend the reappointment of Mark D. Pearlman, M.D. as the S. Jan Behrman Collegiate Professor of Reproductive Medicine, Medical School, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

This collegiate professorship was established in 1999 through a generous gift and pledge from James H. Poppy, M.D. and a departmental fund-raising effort. Dr. Poppy trained in obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Michigan under the guidance of Dr. Behrman.

Dr. Pearlman has acquired a national and international reputation as an expert in the areas of breast disease, gynecologic infectious diseases, quality assurance, and trauma in pregnancy. His scholarly productivity is evidenced by 70 published articles and four books which he has authored. Dr. Pearlman is well-respected as a leader in women’s health, and is frequently invited to lecture at institutional, local and national venues. He currently serves as vice chair and service chief, associate chief of staff, and director of the Breast Fellowship program in Obstetrics and Gynecology. Within the academic sector, Dr. Pearlman is an ad hoc reviewer for multiple journals, including the Journal of Reproductive Medicine, and the New England Journal of Medicine. He is also on the editorial board of Infectious Diseases in Obstetrics and Gynecology, and Obstetrics and Gynecology.
Dr. Pearlman’s continued academic, scholarly, and administrative accomplishments support the distinguished title that he currently holds. I am pleased, therefore, to recommend the reappointment of Mark D. Pearlman, M.D. as the S. CURRENT TITLES: Arthur F. Thurnau Professor, John Stephenson Perrin Professor, and Professor of Philosophy, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TITLE BEING RENEWED: John Stephenson Perrin Professor, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TERM: Five Years, Renewable

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

On the recommendation of the Chair of the Department of Philosophy and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Peter A. Railton as the John Stephenson Perrin Professor, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

As a result of a generous gift from George Marshall Perrin, the John Stephenson Perrin Professorship was established by the Regents in July 1995 and revised in December 2000. This professorship is intended to strengthen present efforts in the area of undergraduate education by the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts and will be an enduring benefit to the University of Michigan and to future generations.

A member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences since 2004, Professor Railton ranks among the most distinguished and sought after philosophers in the profession today. Currently he is vice president and president elect of the American Philosophical Association, Central Division. He has continued to publish in some of the most prestigious venues in the discipline, including Oxford Studies in Meta-ethics, Oxford Studies in Normative Ethics, Philosophical Studies, Philosophy and Phenomenological Research, and Utilitas. He has continued to deliver invited lectures for seminars at the University of California, Berkeley, Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique (Cerisy), Harvard University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, among many others.

Professor Railton received the John D’Arms Award for Distinguished Graduate Mentoring in 2007. In the last five years he has served on 24 dissertation committees, eight as chair or co-chair. A Thurnau Professor since 1989, he continues to innovate in the classroom. In 2006 he introduced a lower division course that combines systematic lectures in ethical theory with discussion sections that have a sustained focus on a particular domain of contemporary moral concern. The course has become a staple of the Philosophy curriculum.
Professor Railton is generous in his service to his department. Outside of his department he has served as a member of the University Committee on the Care and Utilization of Animals and the Ethics Research and Training Program.

We are very pleased to recommend the reappointment of Peter A. Railton as the John Stephenson Perrin Professor, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

Name: Douglas O. Richstone

Current Titles: Lawrence H. Aller Collegiate Professor of Astronomy, and Professor of Astronomy, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

Title Being Renewed: Lawrence H. Aller Collegiate Professor of Astronomy, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

Term: Five Years, Renewable

Effective Dates: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

On the recommendation of the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Douglas O. Richstone as the Lawrence H. Aller Collegiate Professor of Astronomy, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

Lawrence H. Aller was a faculty member at the University of Michigan from 1948 to 1962. The Lawrence H. Aller Collegiate Professorship in Astronomy was established by the Regents in July 2006. A stipend funded from College resources accompanies this professorship.

Professor Richstone served as chair of astronomy (2000-2010) yet he managed to be extremely productive, writing important papers on the masses of supermassive black holes in galaxies and their relationship to galaxy formation and evolution. He has published sixteen papers since 2006 and one of his 2009 papers, co-written with his postdoctoral scholar, is already regarded as a definitive work in the field with over 130 citations.

Professor Richstone has continued his outstanding teaching and mentoring. In addition to serving as chair for ten years, he has served on the LSA Budget Advisory Committee (2006-2010) and as president of the MDM Observatory Corporation (2005-2007), which is jointly owned by Michigan, Dartmouth College, Columbia University, and Ohio State University. He has been Michigan’s voting representative for the Magellan Council since 1997 and participated in a senior review of NASA in 2008. He has been invited by other universities to be a reviewer of their astronomy and astrophysics programs, which is an indication of his visibility in the field.
We are very pleased to recommend the reappointment of Douglas O. Richstone as the Lawrence H. Aller Collegiate Professor of Astronomy, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

On the recommendation of the Dean and Executive Committee of the Stephen M. Ross School of Business, we are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Cindy A. Schipani as the Merwin H. Waterman Collegiate Professor of Business Administration, Stephen M. Ross School of Business, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

The Merwin H. Waterman Collegiate Professorship in Business Administration was approved by the Regents in 1994. Funding for the professorship is provided through unrestricted private funds of the Stephen M. Ross School of Business and through contributions by the Waterman family. The purpose of the professorship is to recognize achievements in and foster development of research in international finance and capitalization.

Professor Schipani received her BA degree from Michigan State University in 1979 and her JD degree from the University of Chicago Law School in 1982. She joined the Stephen M. Ross School of Business as an assistant professor in 1986 and was promoted to associate professor, with tenure, in 1993 and to professor in 1997. She has held many prestigious visiting positions, including Parsons Fellow at the University of Sydney Faculty of Law, Australia and visiting scholar at Erasmus University in Rotterdam.

Professor Schipani is an accomplished researcher with an impressive list of publications and conference presentations. She has received numerous awards and honors. She has served as staff editor of the American Business Law Association Journal and is referee for several prestigious journals. She has been the area chair for law, history and communications in the Stephen M. Ross School of Business since 1996. Professor Schipani has served as the Louis and Myrtle Moskowitz Research Professor of Law and Business and as co-director of the University of Michigan Business School Corporate Governance Project sponsored by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation. She has received a number of invitations to present her research nationally and internationally. She has also received numerous awards for her research, including the Academy of Legal Studies in Business National Award for Excellence and its Holmes-Cardozo Research Award.

We are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Cindy A. Schipani as the Merwin H. Waterman Collegiate Professor of Business Administration, Stephen M. Ross School of Business, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

TITLE BEING RENEWED: Martha Guernsey Colby Collegiate Professor of English and Women's Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TERM: Five Years, Renewable

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

On the recommendation of the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the reappointment of Sidonie A. Smith as the Martha Guernsey Colby Collegiate Professor of English and Women's Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

Martha Guernsey Colby was a faculty member at the University of Michigan from 1921 until her retirement in 1950. The Martha Guernsey Colby Collegiate Professorship in English and Women's Studies was established by the Regents in August 2001. A stipend funded from college resources will accompany this professorship.

Professor Smith is a highly visible and honored colleague. She recently completed a term as president of the Modern Language Association, the flagship organization for studies in English language and literature. She was also chair of the English department (2003-2009) during which the department grew in quality and reputation. She was a leader in the digital humanities cluster hires and served as interim director of the Michigan Institute for the Humanities (winter 2010).

In addition to her local and national leadership roles, Professor Smith has been remarkably active in all facets of the profession. Her work continues to be translated into various languages and reprinted all over the world. Her ground-breaking study of the genre of the autobiography, Reading Autobiography: A Guide to Interpreting Personal Narratives (co-authored with J. Watson), is being published in an augmented second edition from the University of Minnesota Press (2010). She served as a guest editor of a special issue in the journal Biography (2010) and produced several essays that are either forthcoming or recently published. She has produced several scholarly essays on such important issues as the South African Truth and Reconciliation Commission, the phenomenon of Autobiographical Hoaxes and the Ethics of Life Narrative, and on Hillary Rodham Clinton’s Living History and the Genres of Political Authenticity.
Professor Smith is an important mentor to graduate and undergraduate students in the English and Women’s Studies departments. She also served as placement chair for English (2010-2011).

We are very pleased to recommend the reappointment of Sidonie A. Smith as the Martha Guernsey Colby Collegiate Professor of English and Women's Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

ACTION REQUEST: Approval of Reappointment to a Collegiate Professorship

NAME: Robert Joseph Taylor

CURRENT TITLES: Professor of Social Work, with tenure, and Sheila Feld Collegiate Professor of Social Work

TITLE BEING RENEWED: Sheila Feld Collegiate Professor of Social Work

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

With the approval of the executive committee of the School of Social Work, I am pleased to recommend the reappointment of Robert Joseph Taylor as the Sheila Feld Collegiate Professor of Social Work, School of Social Work, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

Professor Taylor was awarded the B.A. degree from Northwestern University in 1974. He received an M.S.W. in 1976, an M.A. in 1977 and a Ph.D. in 1983, all from the University of Michigan. He was awarded a postdoctoral scholarship from the National Institute on Aging in the Institute for Social Research at the University of Michigan for 1983 to 1985. He was appointed to the faculty at the Graduate School of Social Work at Boston College, Boston, Massachusetts and came to the University of Michigan as an assistant professor in 1988. He was promoted to associate professor in 1991 and to professor in 1998.

Professor Taylor has provided exemplary teaching to the students of the School of Social Work. He has been especially devoted to preparing numerous doctoral and postdoctoral students to conduct research that is conceptually and methodologically sound in the neglected but important area of the Black family. The research of Professor Taylor focuses on family studies, Black studies, and gerontology, with a focus on Black family life across the life-span. He has conducted extensive research on the informal social support networks of adult and elderly Black Americans. He has been principal investigator of several grants from the National Institute of Aging which examine the role of religion in the lives of Black and White elderly adults. Other research interests include racial identity, marital relationships, intergenerational family relationships, and the use of social services among Black Americans. In addition, through his positions on several national advisory committees, Professor Taylor provides national leadership in the area of social and behavioral science research on aging populations.
Professor Taylor has provided excellent leadership to the community and to the profession. He has served on many committees including the School’s Doctoral Committee, the Faculty Search Committee and the Executive Committee. He has contributed significantly to the School’s recruitment efforts for both students and faculty. Professor Taylor is widely published in highly respected scholarly journals such as Journal of Marriage and the Family, Social Work, Social Service Review, Journal of Gerontology: Social Sciences, The Sociological Quarterly, Review of Religious Research, and Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion and has published books and numerous book chapters.

It is for these reasons that I recommend the reappointment of Robert J. Taylor as the Sheila Feld Collegiate Professor of Social Work, School of Social Work, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

ACTION REQUEST: Academic Administrative Appointment for a Faculty Member

NAME: Steven L. Ceccio

CURRENT TITLES: Professor of Mechanical Engineering with tenure, and Professor of Naval Architecture and Marine Engineering, without tenure, College of Engineering

ADDITIONAL TITLE: Chair, Department of Naval Architecture and Marine Engineering, College of Engineering

TERM: Five Years, Renewable

EFFECTIVE DATES: July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2016

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the College of Engineering are pleased to recommend the appointment of Steven L. Ceccio as chair, Department of Naval Architecture and Marine Engineering, College of Engineering, for a five-year renewable term, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2016.

Steve Ceccio earned his BS from the University of Michigan, Summa Cum Laude, (1985) and his MS and PhD from the California Institute of Technology (1986 and 1990, respectively), all in mechanical engineering. After serving as a postdoctoral fellow at the California Institute of Technology he joined the University of Michigan, College of Engineering, as an assistant professor in the Department of Mechanical Engineering and Applied Mechanics. He was promoted to associate professor in 1996 and to professor in 2003. From June 1993 through August 1993, he was a research fellow for the American Society for Engineering Education, U.S. Navy.

Professor Ceccio is the director of the Naval Engineering Education Center, a consortium comprised of 15 colleges and universities whose goal is to increase the number of students who graduate with an accredited degree. His research has focused on the study of multiphase flows through the creation of a world-class laboratory with the goal of understanding fundamental processes responsible for their underlying dynamics and transport. He has also developed novel optical diagnostics, including a high repetition rate particle imaging velocimetry system to examine turbulent combustion. Professor Ceccio has received many honors and awards including being elected American Physiological Society fellow, American Society of Mechanical Engineers fellow, and receiving the Department of Energy Young Scientist and Engineer Award.

Professor Ceccio has demonstrated that he possesses the experience, ability, and commitment to fulfill the important responsibilities of a department chair in the College of Engineering. His appointment as chair, Department of Naval Architecture and Marine Engineering, College of Engineering, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2016, is strongly recommended.

On the recommendation of John M. Carethers, M.D., the John G. Searle Professor and Chair of the Department of Internal Medicine, and with the concurrence of the Executive Committee of the Medical School, I am pleased to recommend the appointment of Yuqing Eugene Chen, M.D., Ph.D. as the Frederick G. L. Huetwell Collegiate Professor of Basic Research in Cardiovascular Medicine, Medical School, effective June 1, 2011 through August 31, 2015.

The Frederick G. L. Huetwell Collegiate Professorship in Basic Research in Cardiovascular Medicine was established in 2011 by the estate of Frederick G. L. Huetwell and funds provided by the Department of Internal Medicine. It is intended to support the research of cardiovascular medicine.

Dr. Chen received his M.D. from The Third Military Medical University in Chongqing, Peoples Republic of China in 1985. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Western Ontario in 1995. Dr. Chen completed a postdoctoral fellowship at the Banting and Best Diabetes Center at the University of Toronto from 1995-1997, and a postdoctoral fellowship in cardiovascular disease at the Brigham and Women’s Hospital at Harvard Medical School from 1997-1998. He was appointed as an instructor at Harvard Medical School from 1998-1999. From 1999-2003, he was appointed as assistant professor of biochemistry at the Morehouse School of Medicine in Atlanta, and rose to the rank of associate professor, with tenure, in 2005. Dr. Chen was appointed as associate professor of internal medicine, with tenure, at the University of Michigan in 2005, and was promoted to professor of internal medicine, with tenure, in 2009.

Dr. Chen’s research focuses on elucidating the molecular basis of obesity/diabetes-induced cardiovascular diseases and on developing new drugs and technologies to study and treat those diseases. His research has yielded four patents, 76 published articles, and numerous grants. He has served as a reviewer for multiple journals, and served on the editorial board of several journals, including the Journal of Biological Chemistry, Cardiovascular Drugs and Therapy and...
Arteriosclerosis, Thrombosis and Vascular Biology. Dr. Chen is a grant reviewer for various NIH study sections, and a member the peer review panel of the Nature Science Foundation of China and the Research Grant Council of Hong Kong.

Dr. Chen has an international reputation for his research, as is evidenced by his role as secretary general of the Academy of Cardiovascular Research Excellence, and the honorary professorships he holds at the Institute of Molecular Medicine at Beijing University in Beijing, China, Southern Medical University in Guangzhou, China, and Ziangya Medical College in Changsha, China. He has been invited to present at 75 national and international venues. He has also served as a valuable teacher and mentor; in addition to his didactic teaching, has trained junior faculty, postdoctoral fellows and Ph.D. candidates.

Dr. Chen’s research, teaching and service is well-aligned with the cardiovascular research intended for this chair, and he is worthy to be named the first recipient of this professorship. I am pleased, therefore, to recommend the appointment of Yuqing Eugene Chen, M.D., Ph.D. as the Frederick G. L. Huetwell Collegiate Professor of Basic Cardiovascular Research, Medical School, effective June 1, 2011 through August 31, 2015.

The Dean and Executive Committee of the School of Dentistry are pleased to recommend the appointment of Richard Scott Conley as the Robert W. Browne Professor of Dentistry, School of Dentistry, for a five-year renewable term, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2016.

The Robert W. Browne Professorship in Dentistry was established in 1985 by a gift from Dr. Robert W. Browne, a distinguished School of Dentistry alumnus and supporter. The intent of the professorship is that it be used as a rotating title awarded to a selected School of Dentistry faculty member, the title of which will be held by the selected faculty member for a period of five years, with renewable terms possible.

Professor Conley received his dental education from the University of Pennsylvania in 1996 and a Certificate in Orthodontics from Vanderbilt University Medical Center in 1999. Upon completion of orthodontic training he became an instructor (1999) and later an assistant professor (2001) at Vanderbilt University Medical Center. Professor Conley became a faculty member of the University of Michigan in 2006 as clinical assistant professor and was promoted to clinical associate professor in 2008. Since Professor Conley’s orthodontic training was at a hospital-based program, he attained exceptional expertise in orthognathic surgical cases. This background is highly unique within the profession and Professor Conley’s recruitment to our school has been instrumental in enhancing our instruction and patient care in this field within the School of Dentistry. Professor Conley has been recognized in the clinical arena through several awards, including the Edward H. Angle Research Award for best article published in the peer-reviewed Angle Orthodontist in 2007. He is considered an expert clinical scholar in this field and in obstructive sleep apnea, as evidenced by his invitations to speak on these topics at several national and international conferences.

Professor Conley has numerous roles within the department and has been an exceptional addition to the orthodontics program, the department and the School of Dentistry. He co-directs the course in orthognathic surgery with a faculty member of the Oral Maxillofacial Surgery
Department and coordinates the treatment of patients requiring surgery. His role is critical to providing a well-rounded education in this area to our graduate and undergraduate students. He conducts research in both orthognathic surgery treatment outcomes and in obstructive sleep apnea. Further, Professor Conley has helped facilitate and implement the first paperless clinic in the School of Dentistry that provides the model for the rest of the school to follow. Since Professor Conley's arrival at the University of Michigan, he has been serving as Clinical Director of the graduate and undergraduate programs in the Department of Orthodontics and Pediatric Dentistry.

We are pleased to recommend the appointment of Richard Scott Conley as the Robert W. Browne Professor of Dentistry, School of Dentistry, for a five-year renewable term, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2016.

Professor Dillard received her Bachelor of Arts from Michigan State University in 1988 and Master of Arts from the New School for Social Research in 1991. She attended the University of Michigan where she completed a second Master of Arts in 1992 and Doctorate in 1995. Professor Dillard began her teaching career as an assistant professor at the University of Minnesota in 1995. She was appointed as an assistant professor at New York University in 1997, promoted to associate professor in 2002, and was elected director of their Africana Studies Program in the Department of Social and Cultural Analysis from 2005 to 2006. Professor Dillard joined our faculty as an associate professor, with tenure, in 2006 and was promoted to professor in 2009. She has emerged as a scholar and public intellectual of importance, and has achieved a broad readership that is unusual for an academic scholar – especially one so early in her career.

We are very pleased to recommend the appointment of Angela D. Dillard as director, Residential College, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.

RECOMMENDED TITLES: Professor of Afroamerican and African Studies, with tenure, Professor of Comparative Literature, with tenure, and Professor of French, without tenure, Department of Romance Languages and Literature, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

On the recommendation of the Executive Committees of the Center for Afroamerican and African Studies (CAAS), the Department of Comparative Literature, and the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, and with the endorsement of the Department of Romance Languages and Literatures, we are pleased to recommend the additional appointment for Frieda Ekotto as professor of Afroamerican and African Studies, with tenure, and the transfer of tenure from the Department of Romance Languages and Literatures to the Center for Afroamerican and African Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective September 1, 2011.

Frieda Ekotto earned her Bachelor of Arts at Colorado College in 1986. She attended the University of Minnesota where she completed her Master of Arts in 1989 and Doctorate in 1994. Professor Ekotto began her teaching career as an instructor of French at International Language Villages in 1983 and taught French at Colorado College in 1984. She was a teaching assistant at the University of Minnesota from 1986 to 1992 and returned to Colorado College as a visiting instructor in 1993. She joined our faculty as associate professor in 1994.

Professor Ekotto has had a long-standing association with CAAS. Over the years she has served as a member of their Executive Committee and on search committees. She also served as associate director of CAAS from 2004 to 2005. Professor Ekotto’s work has become noticeably more interdisciplinary and diasporic as she linked her early specialization in French literature with studies of Francophone African literature, cinema, and culture as developed in Africa and transmitted throughout the African diaspora. This shift gives CAAS the opportunity to offer more courses in African literature and in African cinema.
We are very pleased to recommend the additional appointment for Frieda Ekotto as professor of Afroamerican and African studies, with tenure, and the transfer of tenure from the Department of Romance Languages and Literatures to the Center for Afroamerican and African Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective September 1, 2011.

On the recommendation of the Executive Committees of the Department of Anthropology and the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, and with the endorsements of the Center for Afroamerican and African Studies and the Department of Women’s Studies, we are pleased to recommend the additional appointment of Amal Hassan Fadlalla as associate professor of anthropology, without tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

Amal Fadlalla attended the University of Khartoum where she received her Bachelor of Arts in 1986 and Master of Science in 1992. She attended Northwestern University where she completed her Doctorate in anthropology in 2000. Professor Fadlalla began her teaching career as an assistant professor at Michigan in 2003 and was promoted to associate professor, with tenure, in 2009. She has held an adjunct title in the Department of Anthropology since 2003.

Professor Fadlalla’s anthropology training was in the Sudan at the University of Khartoum. This research provided the basis of her dissertation and subsequent book entitled Embodying Honor, Fertility, Foreignness, and Regeneration in Eastern Sudan (University of Wisconsin Press, 2007), which reflects the interdisciplinary dialogues in which she has engaged.

As a cultural anthropologist trained in the fields of gender studies, African studies, medical anthropology, and population and development studies, Professor Fadlalla provides an invaluable interdisciplinary perspective that benefits anthropology students and faculty. She has been an active participant in the medical anthropology minor, teaching two undergraduate classes which fulfill the minor requirements. She also attends anthropology seminars and has been a draw for graduate students applying to the department. Professor Fadlalla has been an active member of the anthropology community presenting papers at the American Association of Anthropology meetings and giving invited lectures at universities in the U.S. and in the Sudan.
We are very pleased to recommend the additional appointment of Amal Hassan Fadlalla as associate professor of anthropology, without tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

TERM: Three Years

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts are pleased to recommend the appointment of Daniel C. Fisher as director, Museum of Paleontology, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.

Professor Fisher attended Harvard University where he earned a Bachelor of Arts, summa cum laude, in 1971, Master of Arts in 1972, and Doctorate in 1975. Professor Fisher began his teaching career as an instructor at the University of Rochester in 1975 and was promoted to assistant professor that same year. He was also appointed as a research associate at the Field Museum of Natural History in 1976. He joined our faculty in 1979 as an assistant professor and an assistant curator; he was promoted through the ranks to professor and curator in 1992. He has also held a title as professor, without tenure, in the Department of Ecology and Evolutionary Biology since 2001 (formerly Department of Biology where he held a courtesy appointment since 1982). Professor Fisher has unusually broad research interests reflected in his ongoing studies of life history (biology) extracted from the tusks of fossil mastodons (paleontology) using the structure of the teeth (involving colleagues in the School of Dentistry) and stable isotopes (geochemistry). He is an outstanding teacher who has attracted and trained some of the department's most successful graduate students. In terms of his research and teaching, his success has been impressive.

We are very pleased to recommend the appointment of Daniel C. Fisher as director, Museum of Paleontology, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.

Andrew D. Gallimore

Arthur F. Thurnau Professor, Professor of Aerospace Engineering, with tenure, College of Engineering, and Associate Dean for Academic Programs and Initiatives, Horace H. Rackham School of Graduate Studies

Associate Dean for Research and Graduate Education, College of Engineering

Five Years, Renewable

September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the College of Engineering are pleased to recommend the appointment of Alec D. Gallimore as associate dean for research and graduate education, College of Engineering, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

Alec Gallimore received his BS in aeronautical engineering from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in 1986 and received his MS in 1988 and PhD in 1992 from Princeton University, both in Aerospace Engineering. He joined the faculty at the University of Michigan in 1992 as an assistant professor in the Department of Aerospace Engineering; in 1994 he was appointed as an assistant professor in the Program of Applied Physics. He was promoted to associate professor, with tenure, in 1998 and to professor in 2004. An experimental plasma physicist who specializes in advanced spacecraft propulsion, Professor Gallimore is founder and director of the Plasmadynamics and Electric Propulsion Laboratory. He has extensive experimental experience with a number of electric propulsion devices including ion thrusters, Hall thrusters, arcjets, and multi-megawatt pulsed coaxial plasma accelerators. He has also implemented a variety of plasma probe and optical diagnostics.

In recognition of his outstanding achievements, Professor Gallimore has been the recipient of many awards including the Outstanding Achievement in Academia Award from the National GEM consortium, the Exemplary Diversity Engagement Award, and the Decoration for Meritorious Civilian Service in 2005 by the United States Air Force for his work on the USAF Science Advisory Board. He was named a fellow of the American Institute of Astronautics and Aeronautics and received an Arthur F. Thurnau Professorship. He has also served as associate dean for academic programs and initiatives in the Horace H. Rackham School of Graduate Studies since 2005.
Alec Gallimore has demonstrated that he possesses the experience, ability, and commitment to fulfill the important responsibilities of an associate dean in the College of Engineering. We are pleased to recommend his appointment as associate dean for research and graduate education, College of Engineering, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

On the recommendation of the Dean and Executive Committee of the Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy, and with the endorsement of the Law School and the School of Public Health, we are pleased to recommend the joint appointment of Jill R. Horwitz as professor of public policy, without tenure, Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy, effective September 1, 2011.

Professor Horwitz received her M.P.P., J.D., and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard University in 1994, 1997 and 2002, respectively. She joined the University of Michigan Law School faculty as an assistant professor in 2003 and was promoted to professor in 2008. She was appointed the Louis and Myrtle Moskowitz Research Professor of Business and Law in 2009. In 2010 she was appointed as a professor in the School of Public Health. Professor Horwitz is on the core faculty of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Clinical Scholars Program at the University of Michigan Medical School. In addition, she is a faculty research fellow at the National Bureau of Economic Research.

Professor Horwitz’s scholarly interests include health law and policy, nonprofit law and policy, torts, and empirical law and economics. Professor Horwitz is an ideal candidate to assist the Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy in deepening its expertise and offerings related to law and health policy.

We are pleased to recommend the joint appointment of Jill R. Horwitz as professor of public policy, without tenure, Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy, effective September 1, 2011.

ACTION REQUEST: Additional Appointment for a Faculty Member

NAME: Yang Liu, Ph.D.

CURRENT TITLE: Charles B. de Nancrède Research Professor of Surgery, Professor of Surgery, with tenure, and Professor of Internal Medicine, without tenure, Medical School

ADDITIONAL TITLE: Professor of Pathology, without tenure, Medical School

EFFECTIVE DATE: June 1, 2011

On the recommendation of Jay L. Hess, M.D., Ph.D., the Carl V. Weller Professor and Chair of the Department of Pathology, I am pleased to recommend the additional appointment of Yang Liu, Ph.D. as professor of pathology, without tenure, Medical School, effective June 1, 2011.

Dr. Liu received the doctorate in immunology in 1988 from the Australian National University in Canberra, Australia. In 1992, he was appointed as an assistant professor of pathology at New York University and was promoted to associate professor, with tenure, at that institution in 1996. From 1998 to 2006, he was professor of pathology at The Ohio State University. He came to the University of Michigan in 2006 as the Charles B. de Nancrède Professor of Surgery, professor, with tenure, Department of Surgery, and in 2007 was appointed as a professor, without tenure, in the Department of Internal Medicine.

Dr. Liu’s research interests are in immunity and cancer biology, specifically the connection between the immune system and the development of cancer, and the regulatory effects that developing cancers have on the systemic immune responses. Dr. Liu has gained an international reputation in this field. He and his laboratory routinely collaborate with Drs. Kunkel, Hogaboam, Dou Nunez and Lukacs in the Department of Pathology. He will continue to provide a role in educating graduate students in the molecular pathology program.

I am confident that this additional appointment will enhance Dr. Liu’s high level of productivity and commitment to research and teaching. I am very pleased, therefore, to recommend the additional appointment of Yang Liu, Ph.D. as professor of pathology, without tenure, Medical School, effective June 1, 2011.

Joyce Marcus

Robert L. Carneiro Distinguished University Professor of Anthropology, and Professor of Anthropology, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

Director, Museum of Anthropology, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

Five Years

July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2016

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts are pleased to recommend the appointment of Joyce Marcus as director, Museum of Anthropology, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2016.

Joyce Marcus received her Bachelor of Arts, magna cum laude, from the University of California, Berkeley, in 1969. She then attended Harvard University where she earned her Master of Arts in 1971 and her Doctorate in 1974. Professor Marcus joined our faculty as a visiting lecturer in 1973, was appointed as an assistant professor and an assistant curator in 1976, and was promoted through the ranks to professor and curator in 1985. She has held the Carneiro Distinguished University Professorship since 2005.

Professor Marcus is a world renowned scholar, and has published 22 books and 143 articles. Her intensive research has earned her multiple prestigious awards, including election to the National Academy of Sciences and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. She was also the first archaeologist to be elected to the Council of the National Academy of Arts and Sciences.

We are very pleased to recommend the appointment of Joyce Marcus as director, Museum of Anthropology, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2016.

Additional Appointment to an Endowed Professorship

David M. Mayer

Assistant Professor of Management and Organizations, Stephen M. Ross School of Business

NBD Bancorp Assistant Professor of Business Administration, Stephen M. Ross School of Business

One Year, Non-Renewable

September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2012

On the recommendation of the Dean and Executive Committee of the Stephen M. Ross School of Business, we are pleased to recommend the appointment of David M. Mayer as the NBD Bancorp Assistant Professor of Business Administration, Stephen M. Ross School of Business, for a one-year non-renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2012.

Effective January 1, 2008, the Regents approved changing the title of the Bank One Corporation Assistant or Associate Professorship in Business Administration back to the NBD Bancorp Assistant or Associate Professorship in Business Administration. The change was requested by the donor to reflect the recent acquisition of Bank One by J.P. Morgan-Chase. The professorship was first established in March 1995 as the NBD Bancorp Assistant or Associate Professorship in Business Administration. It was renamed in July 1997 to the First Chicago NBD Corporation Assistant or Associate Professorship in Business Administration and then renamed again in February 2000 as the Bank One Corporation Assistant or Associate Professorship in Business Administration. Appointments to the professorship are for one year.

Professor Mayer received a Bachelor degree with highest honors in psychology from the University of California, Davis in 1999. He then received a Master of Arts degree and a PhD in industrial/organizational psychology from the University of Maryland in 2002 and 2004, respectively. Professor Mayer joined the Ross School of Business faculty as an assistant professor in 2009.

Professor Mayer’s research interests concern social and ethical issues in organizations. He conducts research in three major areas. The first, behavioral ethics, concerns ethical leadership, ethical climate and pro-social behavior. The second research area, organizational justice, focuses on leadership and justice, justice climate, integrating justice and basic human needs, and individual differences and justice. The third research area, workplace diversity, includes the role of leadership in managing diversity, the effects of diversity in teams and groups, and reactions to diversity-related recruitment efforts such as affirmative action programs.
Professor Mayer’s productivity since graduation has been spectacular: he has published fourteen articles in A-level journals in his field, and has two other articles conditionally accepted for publication. He also has an excellent pipeline that includes seven revise-and-resubmit requests at A-level journals.

On the basis of exceptional productivity, we are pleased to honor Professor Mayer for his excellent record and to support his growth and development by appointing him as the NBD Bancorp Assistant Professor of Business Administration, Stephen M. Ross School of Business, for a one-year non-renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2012.

ADDITIONAL TITLE: Director, Center for Afroamerican and African Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TERM: Two Years

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts are pleased to recommend the appointment of Tiya A. Miles as director, Center for Afroamerican and African Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2013.

Tiya Miles received her Bachelor of Arts from Harvard University in 1992, Master of Arts from Emory University in 1995, and Doctorate from the University of Minnesota in 2000. Professor Miles began her teaching career as an assistant professor at the University of California, Berkeley in 2000 and joined our faculty as an assistant professor in 2003. She was promoted to associate professor, with tenure, in 2007.

Although Professor Miles’ scholarship lies in African American and Native American literature, she has begun to find a home in history that fits intellectually, methodologically, and creatively. Following the publication of her book, Ties that Bind: The Story of an Afro-Cherokee Family in Slavery and Freedom, she was named a Top Young Historian by the History News Network and she was invited to join the American History Association’s Committee on Minority Historians. Her book, The House on Diamond Hill, includes the history of a Cherokee-owned plantation in the state of Georgia and a history of a white woman’s abolitionist activism in Michigan and Ohio—both further illustrating the historical emphasis of her career trajectory. Professor Miles has recently received the A. Elizabeth Taylor Prize for the best article in southern women’s history given by the Southern Association for Women Historians (2010), the National Council on Public History Book Award (2011), the Native American and Indigenous Studies Association Ten Most Influential Books of the First Decade of the 21st Century Prize (2011), and the Georgia Historical Society Lilla M. Hawes Book Award (2011).

We are very pleased to recommend the appointment of Tiya A. Miles as director, Center for Afroamerican and African Studies, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2013.

NAME: Laurel L. Northouse

CURRENT TITLE: Professor of Nursing, with tenure, School of Nursing

ADDITIONAL TITLE: Mary Lou Willard French Professor of Nursing, School of Nursing

TERM: Three Years

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2014

With the approval of the Executive Committee of the School of Nursing, I am pleased to recommend the appointment of Laurel L. Northouse as the Mary Lou Willard French Professor of Nursing, School of Nursing, for a three-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2014.

Mary Lou Willard French was a 1952 graduate of the School of Nursing who had a life-long commitment to all programs and efforts that promoted the well-being of the whole person. The Mary Lou Willard French Professorship in Nursing was established by the Regents in 1999 to support a scholar whose teaching and research focuses on areas having a major impact on the advancement of research in nursing for cancer patients and their families.

Laurel L. Northouse received her Bachelor of Science in nursing from the University of Michigan in 1970. She received her Master of Arts in counseling from Western Michigan University in 1978 and her Master of Science in psychiatric-mental health nursing from Wayne State University in 1979. In 1985, she completed her Doctorate in nursing research from the University of Michigan. Professor Northouse joined our faculty as a professor of nursing, with tenure, in 1999. She is also co-director of the Socio-Behavioral Program of the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center.

Professor Northouse is a widely recognized nurse scientist in the field of cancer research whose research has been funded by the National Institute for Nursing Research, the National Cancer Institute, and the American Cancer Society. During her career, she has conducted several studies that describe the impact of cancer on the family and developed a model to identify patients and family members at higher risk of developing emotional distress following a diagnosis of cancer. Over the past thirteen years, she has developed and tested a family-based program of care, called the FOCUS Program, for cancer patients and their family caregivers. This program provides information and support through content that addresses ways to help patients and caregivers support one another, maintain hope, use active coping strategies, obtain information, and manage symptom distress.
Professor Northouse is a dedicated teacher whose primary teaching responsibilities are in courses that relate to implementing evidence-based research findings in practice settings. In addition, she gives guest lectures in the School of Nursing and the School of Public Health on topics that pertain to conducting theory-based intervention studies. Because of her expertise and research experience, she is also a frequent guest lecturer for undergraduate courses on topics related to working with families of patients with a serious illness. Professor Northouse directs doctoral dissertations and masters research projects on topics related to cancer survivorship, care giving, family communication, and psychosocial adjustment to chronic illness.

I am pleased to recommend the appointment of Laurel L. Northouse as the Mary Lou Willard French Professor of Nursing, School of Nursing, for a three-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2014.

Professor of Electrical Engineering and Computer Science, with tenure, College of Engineering
Chair, Department of Electrical Engineering and Computer Science, Computer Science and Engineering Division, College of Engineering
Five Years, Renewable
July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2016

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the College of Engineering are pleased to recommend the appointment of Marios C. Papaefthymiou as chair, Department of Electrical Engineering and Computer Science, Computer Science and Engineering Division, College of Engineering, for a five-year renewable term, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2016.

Marios Papaefthymiou earned his BS in electrical engineering (1988) from the California Institute of Technology and his SM (1990) and PhD (1993) in electrical engineering and computer science from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. After working as a research assistant at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he joined the faculty at Yale University as an assistant professor in 1993. In 1996 he came to the University of Michigan as an assistant professor in the Department of Electrical Engineering and Computer Science. He was promoted to associate professor in 1999 and to professor in 2005. He has also served as president, chief scientist, and chairman of the board since 2005 of Cyclos Semiconductor, Inc.

Professor Papaefthymiou’s research interests include energy-efficient high-performance computers, VLSI and computer-aided design, algorithms, and parallel and distributed computing. He serves as the director of the Advanced Computer Architecture Laboratory which is the focal point for interdisciplinary research into the theory, design, programming, and applications of advanced computer systems. He has received many awards and distinctions including the US Army Research Office Young Investigator Award, the National Science Foundation CAREER Award, and the Ted Kennedy Family Faculty Team Excellence Award, College of Engineering.

Professor Papaefthymiou has demonstrated that he possesses the experience, ability, and commitment to fulfill the important responsibilities of a department chair in the College of Engineering. His appointment as chair, Department of Electrical Engineering and Computer Science, Computer Science and Engineering Division, College of Engineering, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2016, is strongly recommended.

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the School of Nursing are pleased to recommend the appointment of Susan J. Pressler as associate dean for graduate studies, School of Nursing, for a three-year term, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.

Professor Pressler earned her bachelor of nursing at Indiana State University in 1976 and her master’s and doctorate in nursing from Indiana University in 1980 and 1990, respectively.

With more than 30 years of experience and substantial expertise in teaching and research, Professor Pressler is an accomplished scholar. She has a track record of NIH funding and continues to pursue a focused program of research and regularly disseminates her research as evidenced by more than 75 publications in notable journals. Professor Pressler is highly respected as a master teacher and has significant experience working with graduate students, most notably doctoral students. Through her exceptional mentoring, her PhD students have obtained external funding to support their work and have disseminated their research through peer-reviewed publications and presentations. She has also demonstrated leadership through actively chairing faculty governance committees as well as national service committees. Most recently, she was the chairperson of the American Heart Association Cardiovascular Nursing Council.

Mrinalini Sinha attended Delhi University where she completed her Bachelor of Arts (1980) and Master of Arts (1982). At the State University of New York she received her Master of Arts (1983) and Doctorate (1988). She began her teaching career as a visiting instructor at Albion College (1988-1989). She was awarded a Rockefeller Postdoctoral Fellowship in the Humanities at the University of Minnesota (1990-1991) before being appointed as an assistant professor (1991-1996; promoted to associate professor 1996) at Boston College. At Southern Illinois University, she was appointed as a visiting associate professor (1996-1997), associate professor (1997-2000), and promoted to professor (2007). She joined our faculty as the Alice Freeman Palmer Professor of History in 2010.

The English department is excited by the prospect of an affiliation with Professor Sinha, because there are many colleagues in the department who admire her work and deal with related issues in their own work. She will likely mentor graduate students and engage intellectually with English faculty and students.

We are very pleased to recommend the additional appointment of Mrinalini Sinha as professor of English language and literature, without tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a five-year renewable term, effective September 1, 2011 through August 31, 2016.

He joined our faculty in 1987 as an associate professor and was promoted through the ranks to professor in 1989. Professor Slemrod became the director of the Office of Tax Policy Research in 1987. Professor Slemrod is an internationally renowned scholar working in the areas of taxation, trade, and investment. He is recognized as an outstanding researcher who has provided major contributions to the field of tax policy research, and serves as a consultant to, among others, the U.S. Department of the Treasury, the Canadian Department of Finance, the South African Ministry of Finance, the World Bank, the OECD, and several corporations. Professor Slemrod is a prolific author publishing in top tier journals and a nationally recognized authority on taxation.

We are very pleased to recommend the appointment of Joel B. Slemrod as chair, Department of Economics, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.

ACTION REQUEST: Joint Appointment for a Faculty Member

NAME: Jeffrey A. Smith

CURRENT TITLE: Professor of Economics, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

ADDITIONAL TITLE: Professor of Public Policy, without tenure, Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy

EFFECTIVE DATE: September 1, 2011

On the recommendation of the Dean and Executive Committee of the Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy, and with the endorsement of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the joint appointment of Jeffrey A. Smith as professor of public policy, without tenure, Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy, effective September 1, 2011.

Jeffrey Smith received his B.S. in computer science from the University of Washington in 1985, a B.A. in economics (with honors) from the University of Washington in 1985, an M.A. in economics from the University of Chicago in 1987, and his Ph.D. in economics from the University of Chicago in 1996. He joined the Michigan faculty in 2005. Prior to coming to Michigan he was at the University of Maryland from 2001-2005 and the University of Western Ontario from 1994-2001.

Professor Smith’s research centers on methods for the evaluation of social programs such as job training for the disadvantaged. He has also written papers examining the labor market effects of university quality and the use of statistical treatment rules to assign persons to government programs. He is already actively engaged with many of our graduate students and faculty.

Professor Smith is an ideal candidate to assist the Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy in deepening its connections with the economics department, and expanding our expertise in empirical methods.

We are pleased to recommend the joint appointment of Jeffrey A. Smith as professor of public policy, without tenure, Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy, effective September 1, 2011.

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts are pleased to recommend the appointment of Twila Z. Tardif as associate dean for the social sciences, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a three-year term, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.

Twila Tardif received a Bachelor of Science in psychology from the University of Toronto in 1986. She then attended Yale University where she earned her Master of Science in 1988 and Doctorate in 1993. She first came to the University of Michigan as a junior fellow in the Michigan Society of Fellows. She served as an assistant and then associate professor of psychology at the Chinese University of Hong Kong and then returned to Ann Arbor as an associate professor of psychology, with tenure, and a research associate professor in the Center for Human Growth and Development (CHGD) in 2002. She was promoted to professor of psychology and research professor in CHGD in 2007. From 2002 through 2009 she was director of the Program in Culture and Development in CHGD, and she has just completed a three-year term as director of CHGD during which she reported to the Office of the Vice President for Research. Professor Tardif is a developmental psychologist interested in language acquisition, and she has done research on this and related topics in both the United States and China. In recent years her work has been continuously funded by grants from the Chinese and American National Science Foundations, the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development, and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. Fluent in Chinese, in 1999 she was the founding editor of The Journal of Psychology in Chinese Societies. She is an author of one book and more than 50 articles. In 2009 she was named a fellow of the American Psychological Society. She is familiar with the breadth of the social science division from having served a three-year term on the College’s Social Science Divisional Committee.

We are very pleased to recommend the appointment of Twila Z. Tardif as associate dean for the social sciences, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, for a three-year term, effective July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.

Academic Administrative Appointment for a Faculty Member

Silke-Maria Weineck

Associate Professor of Germanic Languages and Literatures, with tenure, and Associate Professor of Comparative Literature, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

Chair, Department of Comparative Literature, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

July 1, 2011 through December 31, 2011

The Dean and the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts are pleased to recommend the appointment of Silke-Maria Weineck as chair, Department of Comparative Literature, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through December 31, 2011.

Silke-Maria Weineck earned her Bachelor of Arts from Westfälische Wilhelms-Universität in 1987 and her Master of Arts from the Johns Hopkins University in 1989. She attended the University of Pennsylvania where she completed a second Master of Arts in 1993 and her Doctorate in 1995. Professor Weineck began her teaching career as a lecturer at the University of Pennsylvania in 1996. She was appointed as a lecturer at the University of the Arts in 1996 and returned to Pennsylvania as a senior researcher in 1997. Professor Weineck joined our faculty as an assistant professor in 1998 and was promoted to associate professor, with tenure, in 2004.

She has a Ph.D. in comparative literature and an active research agenda in this field. She has a record of active participation on preliminary examination and dissertation committees for graduate students. Over the past decade she has also taught courses that meet together with comparative literature students, and she has demonstrated ongoing involvement in special initiatives sponsored by the Department.

We are very pleased to recommend the appointment of Silke-Maria Weineck as chair, Department of Comparative Literature, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011 through December 31, 2011.

On the recommendation of the Dean and Executive Committee of the Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy, and with the endorsement of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the joint appointment of Yu Xie as professor of public policy, without tenure, Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy, effective September 1, 2011.

Professor Xie earned a B.S. in metallurgical engineering from the Shanghai University of Technology in 1982, a M.S. in sociology from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 1984, and M.A. in the history of science from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 1984, and a Ph.D. in sociology from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 1989. Professor Xie joined the University of Michigan faculty in 1989.

Professor Xie is one of the leading sociologists of his generation and is a legendary teacher at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. Professor Xie's main areas of interest are social stratification, demography, statistical methods, and the sociology of science. Professor Xie is already actively engaged in the Ford School activities as a mentor for our joint doctoral students. Professor Xie is also an ideal candidate to assist the Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy in strengthening its expertise in sociology.

We are pleased to recommend the joint appointment of Yu Xie as professor of public policy, without tenure, Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy, effective September 1, 2011.

ACTION REQUEST: Approval of Extension of Leave for a Faculty Member

NAME: Kai-Uwe Kuhn

CURRENT TITLE: Associate Professor of Economics, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

TYPE OF LEAVE: Leave Beyond One Year

DATES OF CURRENT LEAVE: May 1, 2011 through May 31, 2011

TIME EXTENSION REQUESTED: September 1, 2011 through May 31, 2013

It is recommended that Kai-Uwe Kuhn be granted an extension of leave of absence for academic years 2011-2013, effective September 1, 2011 through May 31, 2013.

Professor Kuhn is an expert in industrial organization and anti-trust. One of his main research areas includes competition policy. He has been asked to serve as chief economist at the European Commission Directorate General for Competition. This is an important position and will be a significant opportunity for professional development. His department and the college support this request.

We respectfully request approval of this extension of leave of absence for Professor Kai-Uwe Kuhn.

ACTION REQUEST: Establishment of an Endowed Professorship

PROPOSED NAME: Henry Clay Bryant Professorship in Pathology, Medical School

EFFECTIVE DATE: June 1, 2011

On the recommendation of Jay L. Hess, M.D., Ph.D., the Carl V. Weller Professor and Chair of the Department of Pathology, and with the concurrence of the Executive Committee of the Medical School, I am pleased to recommend the establishment of the Henry Clay Bryant Professorship in Pathology, Medical School, effective June 1, 2011.

This collegiate professorship is being established by the estate of Henry Clay Bryant, M.D., Ph.D., and with funds from the Department of Pathology to support translational research. The holder of this chair will be a senior faculty member of the Department of Pathology and director of the Division of Translational Research and Clinical Molecular Diagnostic Laboratory in the Department of Pathology. The appointment period for the Henry Clay Bryant Professorship in Pathology may be up to five years, and the appointment may be renewed.

Henry Clay Bryant was born in Birmingham, Alabama in 1915. He graduated from Talladega College in Talladega, Alabama in 1936. He received his M.D. from the University of Michigan Medical School in 1940. After World War II, Dr. Bryant reached the rank of major in the Army Medical Corps. He returned to the University of Michigan to obtain a Ph.D. in pathology in 1949. Dr. Bryant held several academic positions at the University of Michigan and was the primary owner and chief of pathology of the Physicians’ Clinical Laboratory of Ann Arbor, Michigan. Dr. Bryant was a life member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and a founding member of the Ann Arbor Civic Forum.

The Henry Clay Bryant Professorship in Pathology will honor Dr. Bryant’s life work in pathology. I am pleased, therefore, to recommend the establishment of the Henry Clay Bryant Professorship in Pathology, Medical School, effective June 1, 2011.

ACTION REQUEST: Establishment of a Collegiate Research Professorship

PROPOSED NAME: Angus Campbell Collegiate Research Professorship, Office of the Vice President for Research

EFFECTIVE DATE: August 1, 2011

With the approval of the 2011 Research Faculty Awards Committee, I am pleased to request the establishment of the Angus Campbell Collegiate Research Professorship, Office of the Vice President for Research, effective August 1, 2011.

This award is given to recognize exceptional scholarly achievement and impact on advancing knowledge in science, engineering, health, education, the arts, the humanities, or other academic field of study. The holder will be a research professor with at least a 75% appointment who will be appointed to the professorship for five-year, renewable terms. The recipient will be awarded a stipend of $2,000 per year for the initial five-year term, provided by the Office of the Vice President for Research.

Angus Campbell was the director of the Survey Research Center, the largest of the centers comprising the University of Michigan’s Institute for Social Research, from 1948 to 1970, and then became director of the Institute for Social Research from 1970 through 1976. A pioneer in the social sciences and longtime leader in the building of a premier social research organization, Campbell early on played a seminal role in the development of the still ongoing National Election Studies. Later he developed and pursued an interest in the study of the quality of life and in the development of social indicator research more generally. Professor Campbell retired as director of the Institute for Social Research in 1976 and passed away on December 14, 1980.

In recognition of Professor Campbell’s significant contributions, I request that the Regents formally establish the Angus Campbell Collegiate Research Professorship, Office of the Vice President for Research, effective August 1, 2011.

Respectfully submitted,

ACTION REQUEST: Approval to Name an Existing Collegiate Professorship

PROPOSED NAME: Leon Festinger Collegiate Professorship in Management, Stephen M. Ross School of Business

EFFECTIVE DATE: June 1, 2011

The Stephen M. Ross School of Business seeks to name an existing collegiate professorship for Leon Festinger, who was a faculty member at the University of Michigan from 1948-1951. A stipend funded from College resources will accompany this professorship.

Leon Festinger was born in 1919 in New York City and later went on to earn his Bachelor of Science degree from City College of New York in 1939. After completing his undergraduate studies, he attended the University of Iowa where, as a student of the prominent social psychologist Kurt Lewin, he received a Master’s in psychology and then his Ph.D. in 1942.

Kurt Lewin created a Research Center for Group Dynamics at Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) in 1945, and Professor Festinger followed, becoming an assistant professor there. After Lewin died in 1947, Professor Festinger left to become an associate professor at the University of Michigan, where he was program director for the Group Dynamics center. In 1951, he became a full professor of psychology at the University of Minnesota. In the 1950s, Professor Festinger was given a grant from the Behavioral Sciences Division of the Ford Foundation. This grant was part of the research program of the Laboratory for Research in Social Relations which developed Social Comparison Theory (Festinger, 1954).

In 1955, Professor Festinger moved to Stanford University. During his years at Stanford in the 1950s and 1960s, he was at the height of his influence and trained many junior social psychologists, such as Elliot Aronson, who would proceed to have influential careers. In 1968, he became Staudinger Professor of Psychology at the New School for Social Research in New York.

Professor Festinger received a number of honors and awards during his distinguished career. In 1959, he received the Distinguished Scientist Award of the American Psychological Association (APA). He was also elected fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in that year. Other honors included the Distinguished Senior Scientist Award of the Society of Experimental Social Psychology.

Professor Festinger is regarded as one of the most significant social psychologists of the twentieth century, his work showing that it is possible to use the scientific method to investigate complex and significant social phenomena previously considered not amenable to measurement. Professor Festinger’s work was significant not only within the academic discipline of psychology, but also impacted the general public’s understanding of human behavior. For example, he is best known for his theory of cognitive dissonance, which suggests that inconsistency, or “dissonance,” among beliefs or behaviors and evidence causes an uncomfortable psychological tension that must be eliminated in order to restore balance, which has numerous applications to our everyday lives.

A distinguished faculty member will be nominated to receive this honor. The initial term of appointment will be for five years with the possibility of renewal.

PROPOSED NAME: J. Frederick Hoffman Professorship in Medieval and Early Modern English History, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

EFFECTIVE DATE: July 1, 2011

With the approval of the Executive Committee of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the establishment of the J. Frederick Hoffman Professorship in Medieval and Early Modern English History, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011.

The College of Literature, Science, and the Arts has received a generous gift of $2 million from Patricia Hoffman for the purpose of establishing the J. Frederick Hoffman Professorship in Medieval and Early Modern English History in honor of her late husband. Incumbents for this Professorship will be selected in accordance with University policy and practices governing faculty appointments and in accordance with the principles of academic freedom. The Department of History will make a recommendation to the College Executive Committee and the Hoffman family will be notified of the incumbent chosen for the professorship.

In recognition of this significant gift from Mrs. Hoffman, we recommend that the Regents formally establish the J. Frederick Hoffman Professorship in Medieval and Early Modern English History, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective July 1, 2011.

I am pleased to recommend the appointment of Jeffrey L. Evans as vice chancellor for business affairs, Office of Business Affairs, University of Michigan-Dearborn, effective June 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.

Mr. Evans holds an M.B.A. from the University of Michigan Ross School of Business and a B.S. in employment relations from Michigan State University. Mr. Evans served as director of human resources at the University of Michigan-Dearborn since 2003. From 2000-2003, he served as director of human resources at the Michigan Regional Headquarters of Northwest Airlines, after serving in other roles for Northwest Airlines in Detroit and Minneapolis from 1996-2000. Additionally, Mr. Evans served in various human resources positions for the Hilton Hotels Corporation from 1989-1996.

Mr. Evans has been an integral part of the senior officers and deans leadership group for the University of Michigan-Dearborn for nearly nine years. As an active participant on this team, he has been involved in most significant issues addressed by the senior leadership of the campus. He has a thorough understanding of the University's mission, a passion for the campus and strong relationships with colleagues in Ann Arbor. During his time at UM-Dearborn, Mr. Evans has proven his sound leadership skills and ability to develop strategic plans that help the University meet its goals. He has been highly effective in building up a human resources organization on the Dearborn campus that is recognized as an example of best practice in the U-M system. Through his work as the director of human resources, Mr. Evans has developed a deep knowledge of all of the roles of the departments within business affairs. He will use this knowledge, his relationships across campus and previous senior leadership experience from Northwest Airlines as he moves into the role of vice chancellor for business affairs.

I recommend for your approval the appointment of Jeffrey L. Evans as vice chancellor for business affairs, Office of Business Affairs, effective June 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014.
