Call to Order and President’s Opening Remarks

President Schlissel welcomed everyone back for the new academic year, and acknowledged UM-Dearborn Chancellor Domenico Grasso and Vice President and Chief Information Officer Ravi Pendse who were attending their first meeting. He also reported that the Office of the Dean of Students had reached out to more than 500 students whose home communities may have been affected by Hurricane Florence to help address any disruption to their academic and campus life.

President Schlissel said that the Victors for Michigan campaign is evidence of our amazing donors, including members of the Board of Regents. He thanked Regent Weiser and his wife, Eileen, for their $10 million gift to establish The Weiser Diplomacy Center that will be housed at the Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy. The center will bring diplomats and foreign policy experts to campus and support student learning through workshops, simulations, conferences and internship opportunities in the United States and abroad, strengthening UM’s role as a national leader in international policy education.

President Schlissel shared sad news of the death of Regent Emeritus James Waters at his home in Muskegon. A prominent attorney, entrepreneur and philanthropist, Regent Emeritus Waters graduated from the UM Law School in 1970 and served on the Board of Regents for 24 years. He expressed condolences to his wife Nancy, his mother Flora and all of his many loved ones.

President Schlissel addressed a recent incident in which a faculty member refused to provide a previously promised letter of recommendation to a student because she was seeking to study abroad in Israel. He said, “This view is not the position of UM nor does it reflect the position of any department or unit on campus. The UM strongly opposes a boycott of Israeli academic institutions. The academic aspirations of students and their academic freedom are fundamental to UM and our teaching and research missions. We are committed as an institution to support our students’ academic growth. We are a large and diverse public university and the individual opinions of our community range widely on many issues. But personal views and politics should never interfere with our support of students. It is counter to our values and expectations as an institution.” He said that he, the regents and executive officers have been deeply engaged in this situation and will address this issue and the broader questions it has raised.

Regent Ilitch said, “I would like to use this moment to amplify our values. The best interest of our students is paramount. This type of profoundly exclusionary conduct by an UM professor flies completely against our mission. Let us call this what it really is—anti-Semitic. It impairs and interferes with our students’ ability to reach their educational aspirations. This professor was the beneficiary of recommendations during his ascent to a tenured position at our University. Imagine replacing the phrase ‘academic boycott against Israel and students planning to study there’ with your ethnicity, your race or your gender. This is not who UM is.”

President Schlissel announced new measures being implemented to better prevent sexual misconduct and to provide educational and support resources. The new measures for faculty and staff will improve awareness, training, reporting and accountability of sexual misconduct throughout the university.

Beginning today, there is a new, accessible website devoted to sexual misconduct reporting, prevention and education that can be easily accessed by all members of our community. The university-wide work group also recommended that UM invest in required, comprehensive sexual misconduct training and education for all faculty and staff. The first part of the training program will be released later this fall. The work group that made these recommendations included faculty and staff experts on sexual misconduct from all three campuses and Michigan Medicine. It was chaired by Dan Little, former chancellor of UM-Dearborn, and Laurita Thomas, associate vice president for human resources.

Additionally, as announced in February, an outside expert conducted an examination of policies, procedures and practices around sexual misconduct to assess the quality of current efforts and to offer suggestions for improvement. UM is absolutely committed to developing approaches that will serve the university community even more effectively in the future.

President Schlissel continued, “We also have been considering how to respond to the recent ruling of the Sixth Circuit holding that when credibility is at issue in student sexual misconduct cases, a public university must give the accused student an in-person hearing with the opportunity for the accused student or his attorney to cross-examine the accuser and witnesses at the hearing. We have carefully reviewed the Sixth Circuit decision, which includes a significant dissent from one of the circuit judges. While we believe that our current, single-investigator model is fair and consistent with prior legal precedent, the Sixth Circuit disagreed.

“Accordingly, we have decided that the most prudent approach in response to the Sixth Circuit's ruling – the one that strikes the best and most equitable balance between providing a safe educational experience and ensuring fair policies and procedures – is to seek a rehearing from the Sixth Circuit panel that rendered the adverse decision, or from all of the Sixth Circuit judges, to clarify that no student has a constitutional right to a direct, cross-examination. We believe that an appropriate and lawful hearing model is one in which cross-examination is allowed, but in a less intrusive, more trauma-informed manner that allows parties to submit written questions through a neutral hearing officer to ask of the other party and witnesses. Sexual misconduct has no place at the University of Michigan and retaliation against those who report misconduct won’t be tolerated. This is a belief shared by our regents, executive officers and leaders across our community.”
“It’s up to all of us to report sexual misconduct, support those who come forward, participate in education and training programs, to be an advocate for the university community we aspire to be, and to create a safe, inclusive and respectful culture for all.”

Provost Philbert said, “The University’s mission of education, research and service requires that every member of our community feels welcomed, valued and able to work free from the threat of sexual misconduct. Sexual misconduct is a very serious matter, something we seek to prevent and that we are committed to addressing immediately and effectively should it occur.”

“Our work to prevent and address such misconduct begins with education. Last winter we established a working group to determine the most effective ways to educate our community about recognizing and preventing sexual misconduct. Drawing on the expertise of faculty members who do research in this area, the working group recommended mandatory training for all faculty and staff as a first step. This has strong support from deans, department chairs and other faculty leaders across campus.”

“The provost’s office is working closely with the newly formed Educational Advisory Group in developing the online mandatory programs that will be used across the university. The group, which includes faculty with expertise in this area, will also work on the second recommendation – the development of training programs that are tailored to the various work settings of faculty, students and staff.”

Vice President Michels said that the campaign has two goals. One goal is visible leadership support for the prevention and reporting related to sexual misconduct, including mandatory training. The other goal is to ensure messages are simple and straightforward, both online and on campus. An example of this is a new button placed on the UM home page for reporting sexual misconduct. All of the communications are rooted in the Office of Institutional Equity, SAPAC and faculty and staff experts including at the Flint and Dearborn campuses. A brief video on sexual assault awareness was shown.

Regent Richner said that this is a top institutional priority. These plans are crucial to preventing and reducing sexual misconduct. He applauded the initial steps and said the process must be thorough and comprehensive. The message is simple: sexual misconduct will not be tolerated at UM. Regent Ilitch added that it’s important to remember these two words: support and report.

Regent Richner said that each year the board conducts an evaluation of the president’s performance. President Schlissel just finished the fourth year of a five-year contract, making this an important evaluation. The regents solicited feedback from within and outside the University. Their conclusion is that “President Schlissel is knocking the ball out of the park.” He cited examples, including the academic and health system rankings that continue to climb, the Go Blue Guarantee, the hugely successful fund-raising campaign and research funding at record levels. He said, “From the outside it’s easy not to appreciate how demanding and complex the job is, but this president spends 24/7 on his responsibilities.”

Regent Richner announced that the regents will be extending President Schlissel’s contract for another five-year term, with details to be announced. The regents also increased his base salary by 3.5%, which is commensurate with his peers and in recognition of his accomplishments and his value to this institution.
President Schlissel thanked the regents for their advice and mentorship and said, “I have the most challenging but also the best job in higher education. I appreciate the vote of confidence and the opportunity to continue.”

Public Comment

Regent Newman said that the regents need to be engaged in this topic. She requested that a presentation on this topic be scheduled for a future board meeting. She thanked Professor Kelbaugh and the student speakers.

Regent Bernstein supported Regents Newman’s comments and said he looks forward to the presentation and how the UM’s goals compare with other universities. He said, “The University is one of the few institutions in society with an infinite horizon, which makes us perfectly situated.”

Public comment continued with Joseph Trumpey, faculty, on UM sustainability and carbon goals.

He said that nurses are highly valued to the University and it’s important to resolve this.

Regent Ilitch said that she supports Regent Bernstein’s comments. She said she also is saddened to hear about a perceived lack of respect and not feeling valued. Nurses are highly valued and are highly respected and she encouraged both parties to come to the table in the spirit of doing their best. She said, “I lost my father over a year ago and the impact the nurses had on prolonging his life and making him comfortable will never leave me.”
