ACTION REQUEST: Faculty Appointment Approval

NAME: Julian Arato

TITLE: Professor of Law, Law School

TENURE STATUS: With Tenure

EFFECTIVE DATE: August 29, 2022

APPOINTMENT PERIOD: University Year

On the recommendation of the dean, the Law School is pleased to recommend the appointment of Julian Arato as professor of law, with tenure, Law School, effective August 29, 2022.

ACADEMIC DEGREES

Julian Arato received his Bachelor of Arts from Columbia College in 2007, his Masters in philosophy from the University of Cambridge in 2008, his J.D. from New York University School of Law in 2012, and his J.S.D. from Columbia Law School in 2016.

PROFESSIONAL RECORD

Professor Arato spent a year as an associate at Freshfield Bruckhaus Deringer in New York upon completion of his J.D. He joined the Brooklyn faculty in 2015, and was promoted to professor of law, with tenure, in 2020. At Brooklyn, he won the Distinguished Faculty Member of the Year award for the year 2017-18, and since 2017 has been the director of the Law School's Dennis Block Center for the Study of International Business Law. Last fall, he was a visiting professor at Columbia; and beginning this year, he is Brooklyn's associate dean of faculty research and scholarship.

SUMMARY OF EVALUATION

Professor Arato's scholarship focuses on international investment law, which has assumed increased importance in the last fifteen years due to new treaties and arbitral case law and wide-ranging discussions about the legitimacy of international arbitration. Professor Arato is one of the leading junior international economic law scholars in the United States and already a significant player in the field.

EXCERPTS FROM EXTERNAL LETTERS

Reviewer (A)

“Julian is in the top group of academics working in the field [along with Kathleen Claussen, J. Benton Heath, and Sergio Puig... I cannot think of others who have their breadth.”

Reviewer (B)

“Prof. Arato merits appointment to the Michigan Law faculty as a tenured professor – he is an extraordinary [junior] scholar. ,, I would assess his standing as exceptional among his peers, based on his thought leadership in scholarship, his entrepreneurial contributions...and his service to the profession.”

Reviewer (C)

“Professor Arato has developed an impressive body of scholarship on the international investment regime and its most distinctive and controversial feature, Investor-State Dispute Settlement. Of the American legal academics who are writing on this regime, he is among only a handful that I would regard as seriously worth reading...”

Reviewer (D)

“...the best junior scholar (i.e., less than ten years in a tenure-track position) working in international investment law in the United States. His work has been widely cited by international arbitral tribunals, as well as by the International Law Commission. ... Professor Arato’s work shows a scholar who is able to see beyond the headline level to find root causes of the challenge to economic law. His broad knowledge of the field and the theoretical basis for multiple areas of the law (international and private domestic law), combined with fine-grained knowledge of case law, puts him in a unique position among scholars of his generation to contribute to what international economic law should and will look like in the twenty-first century. He is an excellent target for Michigan and one who, if Michigan does not hire him, I expect will move to a comparable school shortly.”

“Arato demonstrates mastery of the doctrine and literature in the field of international investment law. He is a highly capable researcher. Arato seems to be well-accepted in the international economic law academy, and has excellent co-authors and commentators. In terms of specifics on scholarly impact, it is difficult for me to go beyond citation counts, which seem modest but consistent with Arato's time in academia and similar to other fine scholars at this stage of their careers."

Reviewer (F)

"Professor Arato has already made a notable contribution to the scholarship through his work linking investment law and private law. No doubt, this key insight can fuel a research agenda for additional papers, as evidenced by his more recent forthcoming piece, The Elastic Form of Corporate Law."

SUMMARY

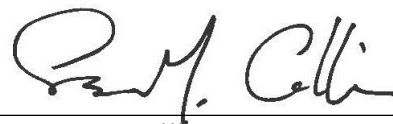

The Law School is pleased to recommend the appointment of Julian Arato as professor of law, with tenure, Law School, effective August 29, 2022.

Professional Record:

Following a post-doctoral fellowship at St. Mary's College (2004-2006) and an appointment as a visiting assistant professor at the University of Missouri-Columbia (2006-2007), Professor Awad joined the faculty at the University of Texas at Austin in 2007 as an assistant professor and was promoted to associate professor, with tenure, in 2015.

Summary of Evaluation:

Teaching: Professor Awad is an outstanding teacher on the topics of race, prejudice, psychology of women and gender, and social psychology at both the graduate and undergraduate levels. Professor Awad is a very active advisor and frequently publishes with her mentees. She is currently chairing five dissertation committees and has graduated thirteen doctoral students.

Research: Professor Awad's scholarship on the psychology of racism and discrimination is not only unique but critically important nationally and locally. She specifically investigates factors that lead to discrimination against minorities and the impact of discrimination on academic outcomes, mental health, and physical health disparities. Her work on Middle Eastern and North African (MENA) communities, a group that faced extreme discrimination following 9/11 and yet whose minority status has been unrecognized, has been recognized as both unique and groundbreaking and she has been credited with establishing this field of study. Professor Awad's level of productivity is impressive. She has published twenty peer-reviewed articles, one co-edited book, eleven book chapters, and ten op-eds since her tenure promotion. Her work has garnered more than 2,700 citations and an h-index of 42. Service: Professor Awad's service at her current institution and to the profession is substantial and distinguished. She has served as a departmental program chair and is now the elected Graduate Studies chair. She is the co-chair of the University Faculty Gender Equity Council, and co-founded—and is the president-elect of—the American Arab, Middle Eastern, North African Psychological Association. Professor Awad is also an associate editor of Cultural Diversity and Ethnic Minority Psychology. She has worked with the U.S. Census, providing data on the racial identity of Arab/MENA Americans with the goal of aiding the U.S. Census in their efforts to add a separate MENA pan-ethnic category on the census. She has also provided consulting to the ACCESS National Research Initiative, and the Arab American Institute.

External Reviewers:

Reviewer A: "...I find Dr. Awad's dossier to be one of the strongest I have reviewed in my career and the quality, quantity and impact of her work is exemplary..."

Reviewer B: "Scholars within the racial/ethnic minority community with her mentoring skills, scholarship productivity, and sustained high quality contributions to the field are rare. Dr. Awad's professional record are [sic] reflective of a quality scholar and effective leader who has helped to shape the direction of ethnic minority psychology. I am confident that she will continue to have an impact on the profession in years to come."

Reviewer C: "...Dr. Awad has put forward ground-breaking theoretical and empirical work examining the experiences of discrimination, health, and acculturation among Americans of Arab/MENA descent. The nature of the work, and her role in it, have positioned her as a leader in the field."

Reviewer D: "I consider Dr. Germine Awad to rank at the top of her field (top 1%) among mid-career psychologists with a research interest and publications involving Arab/MENA Americans... She is truly one of the pioneers in the newly emergent field of Arab/ MENA psychology and has a promising future as a generative leader among early career psychologists with an interest in multicultural issues, research with African and Arab/MENA participants, and women.”

Reviewer E: “...Dr. Awad’s research (as well as her leadership and service in this community) has helped to evolve the research literature as well as increase the competence levels of many clinical professionals in the field.”

Reviewer F: “Dr. Awad has been instrumental in creating a new discipline, AMENA psychology, in a relative vacuum... Dr. Awad is an outstanding researcher and professional citizen. A scholar with Dr. Awad’s stellar research record and professional leadership would be a welcome appointment...”

Summary of Recommendations:

Professor Awad is a nationally recognized scholar and a leader in MENA American experiences. Her scholarly focus is complementary to existing strengths in the Department of Psychology and addresses important issues with relevance for addressing social inequality. She is a skilled teacher and supportive mentor, with significant contributions to diversity, equity, and inclusion and anti-racist efforts across all areas of her work. Professor Awad will enhance the climate of the department, foster collaborations with other units on campus, and build connections with community partners. ACTION REQUEST: Faculty Appointment Approval

NAME: Marcy Balunas, Ph.D.

TITLE: Associate Professor of Microbiology and Immunology,
Medical School

TENURE STATUS: With Tenure

EFFECTIVE DATE: May 15, 2022

APPOINTMENT PERIOD: 12 Months

On the recommendation of Bethany Moore, Ph.D., the Nancy Williams Walls, Ph.D. Professor and chair of the Department of Microbiology and Immunology and with the concurrence of the Executive Committee of the Medical School, I am pleased to recommend the appointment of Marcy Balunas, Ph.D. as associate professor of microbiology and immunology, with tenure, Medical School, effective May 15, 2022.

Academic Degrees:

Marcy Balunas received her B.S. degree in chemistry and biology in 1995 from the University of Rochester. She completed an M.S. degree in plant ecology in 2003 at the State University of New York, and her Ph.D. degree in pharmacognosy in 2007 from the University of Illinois, Chicago.

Professional Record:

Dr. Balunas was appointed as an associate scientist in 2009 at the Center for Biodiversity and Drug Discovery in Panama City, Panama. She was appointed as an assistant professor of medicinal chemistry in 2010, an affiliate faculty in the Center for Environmental Sciences and Engineering, and a joint professor in marine sciences in 2011 at the University of Connecticut. She was appointed as a research associate also in 2011 at the Smithsonian Tropical Research Institute in Panama City, Panama. Dr. Balunas was appointed as a joint professor in chemistry in 2014 and as an associate professor in medicinal chemistry in 2017 at the University of Connecticut.

Summary of Evaluation:

Dr. Balunas' research seeks to enhance natural products research by collaboratively developing new tools and methods. Her research group has pioneered a novel metabolomics software platform, MPACT, specifically designed to deal with the complex challenges of microbiome metabolomics. She has also developed innovative strategies for the induction of specialized metabolites in various in vivo settings to study their impact on the biology system under investigation to overcome challenges with studying microbiome metabolites using only culture-based methods, where the ecosystem is different than found in vivo. Her lab is also focused on applying natural products characterization techniques to the study of ecologically and biologically relevant interactions among living organisms. Dr. Balunas' group has identified several interesting lead compounds that could serve as a basis for antimicrobial drug discovery and have provided new insights regarding how natural product molecules are used to communicate across species. Her work demonstrated for the first time that the bacteria in the squid accessory nidamental gland play a functional role during embryogenesis. These findings in host-microbe symbiosis have already had broad impact in the field of natural products research and it is anticipated that her collaborative interactions will lead to potential drug candidates for gastrointestinal cancers, anti-viral drugs, and anti-parasitic drugs.

Dr. Balunas' research is well-funded through the National Institutes of Health, the Natural Science Foundation, the American Cancer Society, the American Society of Pharmacognosy, and the Moore Foundation. She has published 44 peer-reviewed articles, many in top-tier journals, and has been invited to present her research on 23 occasions regionally, nationally and internationally, including in Panama.

Dr. Balunas teaches a wide variety of courses in the Doctor of Pharmacy Program as well as in medicinal chemistry at the University of Connecticut. Her commitment to increasing gender and racial diversity in STEM fields is solid, she is an involved and committed instructor and mentor. She was awarded the University of Connecticut Provost's Award, General Course Education Course Enhancement for her teaching excellence. She has mentored numerous high school students, graduate students, fellows and post-doctoral researchers.

External Reviewers:

Reviewer A: “I personally find Dr. Balunas’ work on natural products drug discovery to be compelling and important. It is evident that this opinion is shared by the scientific community at large...She has been highly collaborative in her research endeavors, and many of her highly cited papers are for projects that seek to develop novel and open-access tools of use to the scientific community...Collectively, I consider Dr. Balunas’ accomplishments in teaching, research, and service to exceed the expectations one would normally have for an individual seeking appointment as Associate Professor.”

Reviewer B: “I think that [Dr. Balunas’] research outputs reflect a high level of scholarship, scientific ambition, and technical expertise. Marcy largely works in a small and highly fragmented field...Researchers in chemical ecology tend to be highly specialized and cite publications only in their own narrow field. Marcy is distinguished by her versatility in publishing both outstanding articles in chemical ecology and the various ways in which mass spectrometry data can be collected and analyzed... In chemical ecology, which is really her highest priority, I would rate her as near the top.”

Reviewer C: “Without question, I can tell you that Marci’s research is of the highest quality and that she has established herself as a leader in the field of natural products research. Importantly, she is one of the few trained natural product chemists who has made significant inroads in the field of chemical ecology...In addition to working in the areas of chemical ecology and natural product discovery, she has also consistently made important advances in the methods used in natural products research...She has developed innovative approaches to work at the interface of natural products chemistry and microbiology and established herself as a clear leader in her field. This is a growing area of research in which Marci will undoubtedly remain a leader for many years to come.”

Reviewer D: “In an elegant set of experiments, Dr. Balunas and her group demonstrated for the first time that the bacteria in the squid accessory nidamental gland play a functional role during embryogenesis. These findings in host-microbe symbiosis have had broad impact in the field of natural products research. Dr. Balunas has developed into a nationally recognized expert in natural products and pharmacognosy research...She has been resourceful in getting funding not only from federal sources, but from private foundations...I feel confident that if Dr. Balunas were being considered for this action at [my institution] she would be approved without hesitation.”

Reviewer E: “Dr. Balunas has an impressive, solid background in natural products chemistry working with distinguished scientists and leaders in the field for her PhD projects and postdoctoral training...many projects lend themselves to human health applications, traditionally a strong feature of novel chemical entities to display activity useful for human well-being from antibiotics, antivirals, to anti-inflammatory and chemotherapeutic agents.”

Institutionally, Dr. Balunas has served on the Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education (ACPE) subcommittee, the Pharmaceutical Sciences Seminar Committee, the Research Symposium Committee, the Pharmaceutics Faculty Search Committee, the Academic and Technical Standards Committee and the Graduate Affairs Committee. She has also been an active member of the Faculty Senate, the Women in Math and Science Organizing Committee, the Provost's Covid-19 Research Working Group and the University Senate Administration Salary Equity Task Force. On a national and international level, she has served on numerous committees for The American Society of Pharmacognosy, including membership, publicity, nominating, and awards committees. Dr. Balunas is an editorial board member of the Journal of Pharmacy and Pharmacology and the Journal of Natural Products and has been a peer-reviewer for more than 30 journals. She has also been a grant reviewer for the NIH and the Canadian Foundation for Innovation.

Summary of Recommendations:

Dr. Balunas has made a significant impact in natural products research institutionally and nationally. At the University of Michigan, she will increase collaborative research across campus into the metabolomics analysis of microbial populations and systems to identify the bioactive compounds responsible for many phenotypes. NAME: Jason J. Corso

TITLE: Professor of Electrical Engineering and Computer Science,
College of Engineering

TENURE STATUS: With Tenure

EFFECTIVE DATE: August 29, 2022

APPOINTMENT PERIOD: University Year

On the recommendation of the Executive Committee of the College of Engineering, I am pleased to recommend the appointment of Jason J. Corso as professor of electrical engineering and computer science, with tenure, College of Engineering, effective August 29, 2022.

ACADEMIC DEGREES

Jason Corso received his B.S. in computer science in 2000 from Loyola College, Maryland. He received his M.S.E. and Ph.D. in computer science from Johns Hopkins University in 2002 and 2006, respectively. Following graduation, he completed a post-doctoral research fellowship at the University of California, Los Angeles in 2007.

PROFESSIONAL RECORD

Professor Corso was appointed as an assistant professor in 2007 at the State University of New York at Buffalo. He was promoted to associate professor in 2013. He joined the faculty at the University of Michigan as an associate professor, with tenure, in 2014 and was promoted to professor in 2019. Professor Corso left the University of Michigan to be appointed as the inaugural director of the Stevens Institute for Artificial Intelligence. Professor Corso remains at the Stevens Institute as a research professor where he is the PI of a DARPA project.

SUMMARY OF EVALUATION

Professor Corso's expertise lies in the field of computer vision, focusing on video understanding to enable visually informed decision-making. He has established an excellent international reputation in the computer vision field through his scholarship and leadership. He maintains a large research program, funded by a diverse set of sources (NSF, NIH, NIST, ARO, DARPA, IARPA, US Army TARDEC, Toyota, Google, and Samsung). Prior to his departure from the University of Michigan in December 2020, he was a key player in the computer vision research and educational community here and launched several funded collaborations with other College of Engineering faculty. One of his most notable (and earlier) contributions to this field is segmentation-based representations of video that operate in the space-time tensor rather than in a frame-to-frame manner, by introducing the notion of super-voxels to the computer vision community. His more recent contributions include action recognition in video by casting it as a multi-task learning problem to jointly segment and recognize actor-types and action-types, and an active learning approach to understanding unlabeled video data by interactively querying an available human in the loop. In short, he has made a significant impact on his research community through a blend of innovative methodology development and real-world problem solving.

Reviewer (A)

“He stands at the forefront of the field of Indian Law, an author of numerous paradigmatic studies on tribal law, colonialism, and the structures of American government. None of these fields, in fact, would be where they are now without his field-defining scholarship, as well as his steadfast mentorship of junior scholars.”

“While his published work lies firmly within the bounds of traditional law and policy analysis, an increasing amount of it is also situated in interdisciplinary contexts that embrace history, critical race theory, and indigenous knowledges [sic] and traditional law. This development bodes well for a scholar who will reside in both the law school and the department of American Culture.”

“Professor Fletcher offers valuable insight to matters of Indian affairs. These insights and his impact cannot easily be replicated—the authority with which he speaks and the perspectives he contributes to the field flows from both learned knowledge and lived experience.”

“Professor Fletcher is no longer simply a rising star. He is THE star in the field of federal Indian law. There’s simply no one that compares in terms of the quantity, quality and impact of his scholarly work. He’s truly exceptional and carries a heavy weight as the go-to public intellectual in our subject matter area.”

“Professor Fletcher is an outstanding scholar of federal Indian law and of the law of many of the Indian tribes. His literacies range across various areas of U.S. law, and he brings to the legal academy knowledge of legal practices that have been underseen and underappreciated.”

Reviewer (G)

“The bottom line is that he is an extraordinarily prolific, important, and pivotal in the field, and is widely recognized both by others and by me as one of the leading authorities on the law of Indian nations in the world.... [H]e is a national treasure and his scholarly work not only merits tenure but places him among the top scholars in the field of federal Indian law anywhere on earth.”

Reviewer (H)

“...by far the most productive scholar within our field and his distinguished record of publication is far beyond that of most tenured scholars in our field. ... [Politics, Indian Law, and the Constitution is] his most important article to date, outstanding in many ways, ... timely and important.”

Reviewer (I)

“I believe Fletcher to be the most important active professor in the field of federal Indian law. Fletcher is one of those rare and very busy scholars for whom scholarship and service blend in a very substantive way.”

Reviewer (J)

“The most outstanding scholar of federal Indian law at the moment and his prolific and substantive work places him at the top of the leadership board of those plying the convoluted field of federal Indian law. The quality and quantity of his written work exceeds that of any other Native legal scholar. And he is the type of public intellectual who is listened to and respected by those who want to better understand the unique legal status of Indigenous nations.”

There is a growing student demand for courses that focus specifically on Korea’s political institutions, international relations, political economy, democratization, and public and environment policy. Professor Hong’s courses will help meet this demand in both the Department of Political Science and the Nam Center for Korean Studies.

Research: Professor Hong’s research explores authoritarian legacies and historical persistence as well as determinants of policy under authoritarianism. Within these two research categories, she examines subnational variation in the People’s Republic of China, Taiwan, South Korea, and North Korea, as well as additional work that is cross-national and broader in scope. Professor Hong has published fifteen peer-reviewed articles, including her job market paper which is now conditionally accepted at the American Journal of Political Science, one of the top three general political science journals. She has numerous research papers in progress, as well as a solo-authored book manuscript, and she publishes in a wide range of journals from those at the top of the political science discipline to area studies to economics.

Recent and Significant Publications:

Ji Yeon Hong and Wenhui Yang, (Conditional Acceptance, 2022), “Conditional Cross-Border Effects of Violence in China” Conflict Management and Peace Science.

“In Dictator We Trust: The Political Legacy of the New Village Movement in South Korea” with Sunkyung Park and Hyun Joo Yang (Conditional Acceptance, 2022), American Journal of Political Science).

Hong, Ji Yeon and Christopher Paik. “Hate Thy Communist Neighbor: Protestants and Politics in South Korea.” Journal of Economic Behavior & Organization 186 (2021): 707-723.

Service: Professor Hong has an impressive service record, both at her current institution and in the discipline more broadly. At HKUST, she has served on multiple executive committees, search committees, and seminar committees, and has served as the Director of Quantitative Social Analysis since 2021. She is the founding organizer of the Empirical Political Scientists Group in Hong Kong, a research group for scholars interested in quantitative or other innovative methodological approaches in political science, and she organized an Internal Informal Political Economy Seminar in 2015 where junior researchers presented their ongoing research. Professor Hong has placed masters students into numerous top doctoral programs and has published with doctoral students. Her leadership experience will serve the Nam Center for Korean Studies well.

External Reviewers:

Reviewer A: “In the time since she received her PhD, Dr. Hong has established herself as one of the foremost junior comparativists working on East Asia. The quantity and quality of her articles is genuinely impressive...”

Reviewer B: “There is no question that [Professor Hong] is one of the top political scientists working on Korea of her generation, either in the United States or in Korea ...I see no sign of her slowing down, and always look forward to seeing what she is going to do next.”

Reviewer C: “...I have every reason to believe that her energy, intellect, and ideas will continue to lead to provocative and important scholarship for years to come.”

Reviewer D: “I can honestly not think of anyone with as diverse a set of research interests who is publishing this successfully.”

Reviewer E: “...Hong’s work provides a new avenue of research for the Korean politics literature... There is a new generation of scholars that are armed with methodological prowess, local knowledge, and of course the language: I think it is safe to say that Hong certainly is among the leaders of that group.”

Reviewer F: “Her contributions to the comparative politics literature has [sic] both breadth and depth, and I see a strong publication pipeline in her corpus of working papers. She also will make a great teacher, mentor, and colleague.”

Summary of Recommendations:

Professor Hong is a distinguished scholar whose research will strengthen the department’s focus on historical political economy, authoritarianism, and repression. Her leadership, teaching, and mentorship in Korean studies will have an enormous impact on students, the Nam Center for Korean Studies, and the Lieberthal-Rogel Center for Chinese Studies. We are pleased to recommend the appointment of Ji Yeon Hong as associate professor of political science, with tenure, and associate professor in the International Institute, without tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective August 29, 2022.

ACADEMIC DEGREES

Alexandra Klass received her Bachelor of Arts from the University of Michigan in 1988 and her J.D. from University of Wisconsin Law School in 1992.

PROFESSIONAL RECORD

Professor Klass clerked for the Hon. Barbara B. Crabb, Chief Judge of the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Wisconsin, before briefly serving as a special assistant city attorney for the City Attorney's Office of Minneapolis. Professor Klass then practiced with the law firm of Dorsey & Whitney for ten years, as an associate for six years and a partner for four, before entering academia. Professor Klass' work spans many areas of regulation, offering thoughtful, even-handed, and useful policy recommendations, while engaging with broader legal and regulatory themes. She is a universally recognized leader in energy law, which will only grow in importance for both our students and society. Professor Klass' articles have often been selected as among the annual best articles in land use and environmental law. Her scholarship consistently displays a deep, broad, and nuanced knowledge of the wildly complex area of energy law.

Reviewer (A)

“Much of Klass’s work historically has been focused on specific aspects of energy law. She provides significant detailed description and analysis (sometimes, as noted above, too much detail) on an important issue in the field, and then provides a range of policy solutions. She has long been a prolific scholar. Based on this work alone, Klass has joined the leading group of scholars in the field.”

Reviewer (B)

“Professor Klass’s research portfolio has been impressively broad over the years. She has made important contributions in a range of areas, including: tort law (writing about punitive damages); constitutional law (focusing on federalism); and property law (with papers on the public trust doctrine and eminent domain). Over the last decade or so, however, she has concentrated her efforts on the emerging field of energy law. She is not only a leading voice in that field, she is one of its architects. Her three forthcoming energy law articles demonstrate her centrality to the field, the breadth of her interest in and familiarity with it, her scholarly creativity and productivity, and her generosity with students. Even without considering the remainder of her impressive scholarly record, these three pieces make a great case for offering her a position on your faculty.”

“...the most accomplished energy law scholar in the country. I cannot overstate the high regard I have for Professor Klass’s scholarship. She has produced a steady stream of groundbreaking work....Klass is the model of a prolific, successful, and impactful scholar. In my view, she ranks at the top of U.S. scholars engaged in work on energy law issues.”

Reviewer (D)

“...among the four or five scholars at the top of the field of energy law. Professor Klass has an uncanny ability to distill highly complex statutes and regulations into explanations and analyses that are comprehensible to readers who are not experts in the relevant subject matter. Professor Klass produces scholarly work of the highest quality.”

Reviewer (E)

“...one of the leading academics today in energy law, and particularly in the intersection of energy law with property law. Professor Klass consistently displays an almost dazzling comprehension of energy systems, their transportation requirements, and the legal systems that govern them, along with an impressive ability to suggest ways to improve their efficiency in meeting modern clean energy needs.”

Reviewer (F)

“Hiring Alex Klass will make UM Law School a leader in energy law and scholarship on the energy transition. I can recommend her candidacy without caveat or qualification. Prof. Klass is one of the nation’s top energy law scholars. She is a smart, thorough, careful, precise thinker, and a very clear and effective communicator. She consistently hits the very top journals in our field, deservedly.”

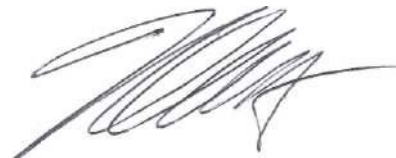

Reviewer (G)

“Professor Klass is the foremost energy law scholar in the country. Her work is of uniform excellence, always of high quality, and has made and will continue to make significant contributions to the field of energy law and policy. I believe Professor Klass is the most important energy law scholar in the country. In addition to the wide range of topics that she has addressed, she has amassed a network of other scholars with whom she has written a series of important law review articles.”

SUMMARY

The Law School is pleased to recommend the appointment of Alexandra Klass as professor of law, with tenure, effective August 29, 2022, and as the James G. Degnan Professor of Law, Law School, effective August 29, 2022 through August 31, 2027.

NAME: Sanjukta Paul
TITLE: Professor of Law, Law School
TENURE STATUS: With Tenure
EFFECTIVE DATE: August 29, 2022
APPOINTMENT PERIOD: University Year

On the recommendation of the dean, the Law School is pleased to recommend the appointment of Sanjukta Paul as professor of law, with tenure, Law School, effective August 29, 2022.

ACADEMIC DEGREES

Sanjukta Paul received her Bachelor of Arts from the University of Iowa in 1998, her Masters in philosophy from the University of Pittsburgh in 2000, and her J.D. from Yale Law School in 2003.

PROFESSIONAL RECORD

Professor Paul attended Yale Law School, where she was a Coker Fellow, the co-chair of the Workers' Rights Project, and an editor of the Human Rights and Development Law Journal. Following law school, she clerked for 9th Circuit Judge Alfred Goodwin and spent nine years in private practice, first with Debevoise & Plimpton, and later at a small firm and as a solo practitioner, litigating employment, labor, and civil rights cases. In 2013, Professor Paul began a three-year David Epstein Fellowship at University of California, Los Angeles, where she designed and taught the Workers' Rights Litigation Project. Professor Paul joined Wayne State Law School in 2017 and was promoted to professor of law, with tenure, in 2022.

SUMMARY OF EVALUATION

Professor Paul's scholarship focuses on how antitrust law treats and has historically treated workers' collective action. The topic has become more urgent in the 21st century, as employers have sought to shift more work from employees to independent contractors. The labor law scholars who wrote external reviews for us tell us that Professor Paul's work has transformed their understanding of the intersection between labor law and antitrust law.

EXCERPTS FROM EXTERNAL LETTERS

Reviewer (A)

“Within the field of labor and employment law, Paul is highly regarded as the very top scholar researching and writing at the intersection of work law and competition law. Her work has had a tremendous influence on a growing body of scholarship in both the U.S. and in Europe.”

Reviewer (B)

“Professor Paul is an outstanding, insightful, and energetic participant in current efforts to shake up antitrust law—to reorient its priorities in a more democratic and egalitarian direction that protects small and independent producers as well as consumers, and that is truer to the objectives of the popular movement that produced the antitrust statutes. The quantity and quality of her work at this early stage of her career warrants an appointment at a top law school, including yours and mine.”

Reviewer (C)

“Paul is an important member of a group of scholars engaged in historically informed progressive antitrust scholarship from the side that begins with thinking about labor organizing. Professor Paul has emerged at the top of a cohort of younger scholars.”

Reviewer (D)

“Professor Paul is becoming one of the leading scholars (of any generational cohort) who have begun to make antitrust in general a field of new and exciting intellectual ferment and debate. Given her trajectory and ambition thus far, I have no doubt that she will continue to make major contributions and continue to help broaden, and perhaps redefine, the field. She most certainly deserves a place in a front-ranking school.”

Reviewer (E)

“I am not yet persuaded that her vision of a moral political economy for antitrust is clear, and I do not find it particularly attractive at this point. She may do more in future work. It seems clear to me that what she is proposing would come at an enormous social cost – perhaps wiping out the franchise system of restricted distribution as we know it – and all without anything explicit in the statute to authorize such a move.”

SUMMARY

The Law School is pleased to recommend the appointment of Sanjukta Paul as professor of law, with tenure, Law School, effective August 29, 2022.

NAME: Aaron Perzanowski

TITLES: Thomas W. Lacchia Professor of Law, and Professor of Law, Law School

TENURE STATUS: With Tenure

EFFECTIVE DATE: August 29, 2022

APPOINTMENT PERIOD: University Year

On the recommendation of the dean, the Law School is pleased to recommend the appointment of Aaron Perzanowski as professor of law, with tenure, effective August 29, 2022, and as the Thomas W. Lacchia Professor of Law, Law School, effective August 29, 2022 through August 31, 2027.

ACADEMIC DEGREES

Aaron Perzanowski received his Bachelor of Arts from Kenyon College in 2001 and his J.D. from University of California-Berkeley School of Law in 2006.

PROFESSIONAL RECORD

Professor Perzanowski practiced for two years as a litigation associate with Fenwick & West, and then spent a year as the Microsoft fellow at Berkeley Law School. He was a member of the Wayne State University Law School faculty from 2009-2012. Professor Perzanowski then joined Case Western Reserve University School of Law in 2013 and was promoted to professor of law, with tenure, in 2015.

SUMMARY OF EVALUATION

Professor Perzanowski is a leading, influential, and important scholar, whose work has transformed scholars' understanding of the relationship between personal property and intellectual property. His most influential work explores the conflict between copyright owners' intellectual property rights and consumers' personal property rights. Copyright owners are entitled to control the reproduction and distribution of copies of their works, but consumers typically have extensive personal property rights to use objects that they have purchased or otherwise come to own.

Reviewer (A)

“Perzanowski’s scholarship is insightful, creative, thoughtful, and important. It has deservedly attracted national and international widespread recognition for him and his work. I have known Perzanowski since he became a law professor. I have read much of his work, and it always hits the mark of good scholarship: it identifies an important and timely subject, often one that has gone unexplored or at least underexplored, which he then probes with deep analysis and good, clear writing.”

Reviewer (B)

“...one of the top copyright scholars of his academic generation. Professor Perzanowski does three things well. First, he conducts original empirical research, using a mixture of qualitative and quantitative methods, to document how consumers and members of creative communities think about the ownership of information. ... In every case, he reveals gaps between how IP models the world and how the world actually works. Second, Professor Perzanowski is a synthesizer and popularizer. The End of Ownership is a clear and level-headed take on the intersection of IP and personal property law. ... I have recommended it without reservation to students, colleagues from other disciplines, and non-lawyers. ... His forthcoming book on the right to repair is perfectly timed and targeted to have similar impact. And third, Professor Perzanowski writes sophisticated articles in the standard law-review genre: thoughtful policy proposals layered atop a doctrinal foundation. ... These papers mark him out as a leading scholar on copyright’s system of exclusive rights, capable of seeing both the trees and the forest.”

Reviewer (C)

“...one of the most outstanding scholars in the intersection of consumer law and intellectual property and has attained a notable level of both national and international recognition for his pathbreaking [sic] scholarship on the right to repair as well as other high-profile academic activities.”

“Professor Perzanowski is an academic of the highest caliber and would be an excellent addition to the Michigan Law School faculty. The quality, quantity, focus and scholarly impact of his works is tremendous....In my assessment, Professor Perzanowski is one of the leading scholars in the field of copyright. His scholarly contributions have a recognized stature that place him among the top ten academics focused in copyright law today.”

“[he] clearly make[s] high-quality contributions to the relevant scholarly literature and he has a good eye for identifying important issues that are currently emerging as a result of changes in law and technology, and that he can explore those issues in interesting ways and add new dimensions to our understanding of them, even when other scholars have previously tackled those issues.”

Reviewer (F)

“Perzanowski displays the ability to work in many modes—close doctrinal sociological inquiry into consumer habits and qualitative empirical research into communities of creation and consumption. His intellectual agility and creativity are unusual, and his prescient view of copyright’s potential uses has proven visionary as the market and various technologies have only continued to bear out his early predictions.”

Reviewer (G)

“...a very well-regarded scholar for both his digital exhaustion and IP norms scholarship. Perzanowski’s work is considered a standard for its clarity and substantiation of claims. Indeed, his articles are often referred to as exemplars in the field for the kind of empirical work in which he engages.”

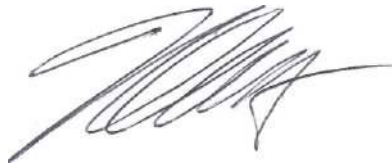

Reviewer (H)

“...materially advances copyright scholarship and policy conversations about the future of ownership in an increasingly digital world. In closing, I think Professor Perzanowski would fit in well as part of a robust and rigorous IP program.”

SUMMARY

The Law School is pleased to recommend the appointment of Aaron Perzanowski as professor of law, with tenure, effective August 29, 2022, and as the Thomas W. Lacchia Professor of Law, Law School, effective August 29, 2022 through August 31, 2027.

Reviewer F: "She will bring not only top notch research in an important and understudied area, but also extensive leadership experience."

Summary of Recommendations:

Professor Powers's impact on the field, both nationally and internationally, is unmatched due to her innovative application of multiple methods aimed at understanding how media industries play a role in privileging white and male experience and deprivileging the experiences of minoritized groups of people. She will bring important and critical expertise to the university and the college through her research, leadership, instructional commitments, and thoughtful recognition of the systemic inequities highly in need of change. NAME: Jennifer Randall

TITLE: Associate Professor of Education, School of Education

TENURE STATUS: With Tenure

EFFECTIVE DATE: August 29, 2022

APPOINTMENT PERIOD: University Year

On the recommendation of the executive committee of the School of Education, we are pleased to recommend the appointment of Jennifer Randall as associate professor of education, with tenure, School of Education, effective August 29, 2022.

ACADEMIC DEGREES

Jennifer Randall received her bachelor's degree in psychology and history (1996) and her master of arts in teaching degree (1999) from Duke University, and her Ph.D. in educational studies from Emory University (2007).

PROFESSIONAL RECORD

Upon receiving her Ph.D., Professor Thomas was first appointed as an assistant professor of education in the College of Education at the University of Massachusetts Amherst, and she was promoted to associate professor, with tenure, in 2013. She has also held administrative appointments as the director of evaluation for the Center for Educational Assessment (2007-present) and as the associate dean of academic affairs in the College of Education (2016-2021).

SUMMARY OF EVALUATION

Professor Randall is a scholar of educational assessment and psychometrics who studies measurement issues (both large-scale and classroom-based) and the ways in which assessments take into consideration, and impact, historically marginalized populations in the U.S. and abroad. She explores this through two overarching strands of research: core technical issues in psychometrics, such as applications of Rasch modeling, instrument validation, and Differential Item Functioning (DIF); and culturally sustaining and antiracist approaches to developing assessment and measurement tools and practices. She is a leading psychometrics scholar who publishes her research in top peer-reviewed journals, and has received support from the National Science Foundation and the Chan/Zuckerberg Initiative to fund her research.

Professor Randall's teaching reflects her commitment to applying her research on social justice in assessment and measurement adeptly to her own pedagogical practice. She teaches courses focused on classroom assessment, research methods, statistics sequence, measurement, and scale development. Her instruction is guided by social justice pedagogical practices, which are centered in democracy and the ability to exercise one's full humanity. Her course evaluations and comments from students are uniformly positive, and alongside her course syllabi and teaching artifacts, provide evidence of a purposeful, thoughtful, and committed instructor. Her dedication to teaching and to mentorship is demonstrated in her receipt of the Amherst College of Education Outstanding Teaching Award in 2013 and the NERA Thomas F. Donlon Memorial Award for Distinguished Mentoring in 2021.

EXCERPTS FROM EXTERNAL LETTERS

Reviewer A: "If I had to bet who would have the most impact on the field in the next 10 years, I would put my chips on Dr. Randall. Despite her significant accomplishments I believe she is just hitting her stride as a leading thinker in this field."

Reviewer B: "[Professor Randall] straddles a developing field and community of critical measurement and assessment scholars who situate theoretical and critical stances on anti-racism and decoloniality in the application of justice-oriented assessments and practices aimed at exposing and interrogating key wedges of inequality of educational reform in the US and internationally (for instance, Randall, 2021). What is especially impressive are the evidence of work that builds on key questions and threads of her larger research interests while making her assessment scholarship palatable for multiple audiences (Randall, Poe, & Slomp, 2021)."

Reviewer C: "[Professor Randall] is an outstanding leader in the field of educational measurement, and what is particularly impressive about her is the depth at which she conceptualizes a problem and approaches her research and writings. She is already positioned to lead our field in reconceptualizing assessments to ensure fairness and social justice."

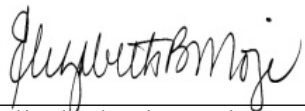

Reviewer D: "Dr. Randall provides a much deeper theoretical and practical analysis because it is grounded, in an exceptionally cogent way, in measurement validity theory as well as an explicitly anti-racist, critical framing. She demonstrates, for example, why construct underrepresentation—a threat to test validity that pervades all of testing due to cost and instrumentation constraints—necessarily affects white and BIPOC students differentially. For one thing, the removal of context, seemingly to make everything neutral and fair, in fact, privileges the linguistic and cultural characteristics associated with whiteness. Dr. Randall then goes on to provide a clear, justice-oriented and antiracist framing to help measurement researchers rethink construct definition and representation as part of test development."

Reviewer E: "In terms of originality and sophistication, Dr. Randall's ideas are considerably above those of other scholars at the same stage in their careers in the field. Very few psychometricians are used to thinking across disciplines and able to develop psychometric models based on robust conceptual frameworks on culture and society."

SUMMARY

Professor Randall's scholarship has been recognized as prominent and highly significant. She will be a valued colleague and productive scholar. We are pleased to recommend the appointment of Jennifer Randall as associate professor of education, with tenure, School of Education, effective August 29, 2022.

Reviewer A: "Megan asks critically important questions in her research and answers them in rigorous and compelling ways. Her work addresses big picture issues related to why some political actors embark upon challenging and complicated projects to transform society, why some socially transformative projects are more successful than others, and how these projects transform the societies and polities where they operate... Megan's publication record is impressive, both in terms of quantity and quality."

Reviewer B: "I think Prof. Stewart has surpassed the bar for tenure at most major research institutions on the basis of her published works as well as her promising work-in progress. Prof. Stewart has established an independent scholarly voice in the area of rebel governance, undertakes high-quality scholarship, has developed scholarly momentum, and conveys an upward trajectory, suggesting that this record of publication and scholarly activities will continue or accelerate over time.”

Reviewer C: “I write this letter in strong support of Professor Megan Stewart’s appointment at the rank of Associate Professor, with tenure, at the Public Policy School at University of Michigan. Professor Stewart has produced an impressive body of research in the six years since she received her Ph.D. degree. The quality and quantity of scholarship she has produced both exceed the expectations for tenure at any major research university. She is an active member of the profession, participating in major professional associations, academic conferences, and smaller workshops. In addition, she has a future research trajectory that will lead to many more high-profile publications that will have a substantial impact on the field. She is a slam-dunk case for tenure.”

Reviewer D: “Close reading of her scholarship shows her to be a subtle and systematic analyst of crucial issues at the intersection of international relations and political violence, including and especially the politics of rebel governance and state building. I especially appreciate the care she takes in her research; unlike many others, she is not after flashy takeaways, but rather wants to understand and express the tradeoffs inherent in the issues she explores. Her research is also profoundly policy-relevant, and the public outreach writings listed on her vita demonstrate that the policy world – from the United States Institute of Peace to the RAND Corporation – is interested. Her first project speaks to issues with which State Department and NGO staffers wrestle on a daily basis. Her newer, second project intervenes in ongoing debates in the US and elsewhere about race and inequality. These are weighty and important topics, and Stewart should be commended for taking them on.”

Reviewer E: “Dr. Stewart is on a stellar research trajectory and has produced a number of studies that easily establish her as a leading scholar in the field of conflict studies. She has a strong reputation in the profession. I have every reason to expect she will continue to push the boundaries of our field through innovative and productive scholarship.”

Reviewer F: “I find Stewart to be an impressive junior scholar whose publication record justifies her appointment as an associate professor with tenure at a major university. Her book is a high-quality study that makes important empirical and theoretical contributions to our understanding of rebel governance and rebel identity. She has co-authored several papers that have been published in high profile venues.”

Reviewer G: “An initial summary is that I am certain that offering a tenured associate professor position to Professor Stewart is an excellent idea. Though she has only been active in the profession a short while, she has already amassed an admirable research record and has positioned herself at the forefront of an impressive group of scholars re-shaping how internal conflict is conceived and studied.”

Reviewer H: “Professor Stewart’s contribution to the fields of Political Science and Security Studies is clear, important, and innovative. She has published in international and outstanding research outlets and her academic commitment in the international community is vibrant and regular. Hence, Megan Stewart is an internationally well-known scholar with a brilliant CV. She is clearly one of the new global experts on rebel governance and legacies of conflict.”

Reviewer I: “Stewart has established herself as an important scholar of non-state armed groups and is at the forefront of thinking on how these organizations govern both the territories they control during war and the governments they establish afterwards. Her signal contribution has been to highlight the various ways in which armed group behavior during conflict is shaped by long-run governing aspirations, not simply the tactical or operational exigencies of winning in the present. This important shift in perspective brings scholarship into line with how rebel leaders write about their own choices and is an important advance.”

SUMMARY

Professor Stewart is an outstanding researcher and educator. We are very pleased to recommend the appointment of Megan Stewart as associate professor of public policy, with tenure, Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy, effective August 29, 2022.

On the recommendation of the dean, the Law School is pleased to recommend the appointment of Christopher J. Walker as professor of law, with tenure, Law School, effective August 29, 2022.

ACADEMIC DEGREES

Christopher J. Walker received his Bachelor of Arts from Brigham Young University in 2002, his Masters in public policy from Harvard University in 2006, and his J.D. from Stanford University School of Law in 2006.

PROFESSIONAL RECORD

Professor Walker clerked for Judge Alex Kozinski on the Ninth Circuit and for Justice Anthony Kennedy on the U.S. Supreme Court. Professor Walker then worked in the private practice for three years before joining The Ohio State University School of Law in 2012. He was tenured in 2016 and promoted to professor in 2019.

Professor Walker is widely recognized as one of the country's leading figures in administrative law. His primary contributions have been descriptive and empirical. He wants to better understand how agencies operate, which has led him to conduct groundbreaking studies on how agencies participate in crafting the statutes that they administer, how they interpret those statutes, and how judges can use judicial review to improve agency performance. Professor Walker is also remarkably prolific, authoring or co-authoring 39 articles in nine years

Reviewer (A)

“Walker has established himself as a leading figure in administrative law. On the basis of his substantial body of thoughtful scholarship, the widely held esteem with which he is held within the field of administrative law, and his integrity and exceptional collegiality, Walker would make a great addition to the Michigan faculty.”

Reviewer (B)

“In my view, the quality of Professor Walker’s work generally ranges from great to outstanding. ... Professor Walker at least a leading administrative law scholar, if not the leading administrative law scholar, of his proximate cohort. He would be a great lateral hire for the University of Michigan or any other law school, including my own.”

Reviewer (C)

“Professor Walker is an excellent professor of administrative law, and any law faculty should be delighted to have him. He well exceeds the standards for tenure and lateral appointment at [her university] in terms of breadth, depth, creativity, and high productivity. ... If one is looking for a true scholar of administrative law, but one conversant in both the details and broad themes of administrative law, Professor Walker is it.”

“Professor Walker is a prolific scholar. I have read most of his scores of articles. They are consistently high-quality works. I always learn a lot from reading each article. His work is wide-ranging. He focuses on procedural and institutional issues, but he has learned a lot about the substantive issues in fields as diverse as immigration law, tax law, and patent law in the process of addressing the procedural and institutional issues that arise in those fields.”

Reviewer (E)

“I regard Professor Walker as one of the leading voices in current administrative law scholarship and strongly recommend that you offer him the position.”

“...a central figure in the field of administrative law. ... I view it as a credit to Professor Walker that he sees so many opportunities to test, interrogate, and revisit premises other scholars and courts have relied upon. He also writes in a way that is generous to other scholarship, expressly framing his work in relation in that way which may make it appear more responsive that it is.

But most important, in the areas I discuss above and others, his work advances our understanding of how our system of government works.”

Reviewer C: "In 'DACA and the dream of becoming a physician' (New England Journal of Medicine, impact factor 75 in 2019), Dr. Weinstein takes up an important area of investigation to address equity gaps in resident education. This work calls attention to the barriers and vulnerabilities faced by medical students in the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program who are applying to residency programs...The publication had broad influence on residency programs' awareness and evaluation of DACA students. NEJM metrics indicated that it received 29,000 page views in the first month and was in the 98th percentile for social media attention among medical journals. She is an innovator, leader of change, an outstanding educator, and is very active in service at the institutional and national levels. Therefore, I am pleased to recommend the appointment of Debra F. EXCERPTS FROM EXTERNAL LETTERS

Reviewer (A)

“The work is deeply learned. It is interesting. The questions that he asks are compelling. I did not always agree with his analysis, but I certainly learned a lot from it. He is undoubtedly someone who will continue to produce strong and compelling work for many years to come.”

“Professor Yankah is regarded as one of the world’s leading scholars working at the intersection of criminal law and philosophy. His publications, both in terms of quality and quantity, are highly-respected both nationally and internationally. In particular, Professor Yankah is recognized as one of the most effective advocates for a vision of criminal law inspired by Aristotelian republicanism.”

Reviewer (C)

“Professor Yankah’s work is solid, serious and sophisticated. In my view, the strength of his scholarship lies in his singular ability to combine liberal political theory (broadly construed to encompass republicanism) and a critical understanding of race. In this respect, he clearly leads other writers with comparable academic experience and credentials, and his voice in the field currently resonates far.”

Reviewer (D)

“Yankah takes a different route, which is why his work is distinctive and interesting. He looks back to Aristotle, and a conception of our essentially social nature, to ground a communitarian type of republicanism, though one that still finds a place for versions of central liberal values. This then requires him to provide an account of the kind of claim that the criminal law, as part of the law of a republican polity, can have on its citizens (he rightly eschews the appeals to some idea of consent that characterise contractualist liberal accounts).”

“Professor Yankah’s takes are extremely subtle, thoughtful, and inspirational. I can also report that he is very well-respected in the world of criminal law theory, and his sustained focus on issues of criminal law and race makes him unique in his generation of criminal law theorists.”

His research findings were among the first to establish a significant relationship between favorable nurse practice environments and lower surgical mortality. With over 100 peer-reviewed publications, Professor Friese's research findings have informed clinical practice guidelines and state and federal health policy. He has been consistently funded by NIH grants since arriving at UM. His research has been published in Medical Care, Cancer, Health Services Research, Nursing Research, and has been presented at national and international meetings.

Professor Friese has taught a number of undergraduate and graduate courses with excellent student evaluations, as well as lectures widely on evidence-based oncology nursing practice, nursing workforce, and health care policy. He frequently guest lectures in the graduate program on health services and quality of care research, as well as symptom and side effect management for patients with cancer. Supported by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, she identified models of integrated services for vulnerable populations. She completed a study of health plan choice behavior, funded by AHRQ and BCBS-M Foundation. With support from the NIMH and NIAAA, she has studied the effects of a mental health carve-out on use and cost of mental health and medical services among an employed population, and the long-term consequences of alcoholism in a community-based sample. Through support from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation and the BCBS-M Foundation, she has examined the reintegration of medical and mental health services in employed and Medicaid populations. These sponsors have also supported study of the variation in risk adjustment methods used in provider profiling.

CURRENT TITLE: Associate Dean of Libraries, University Library

ADDITIONAL TITLE: Interim University Librarian and Dean of Libraries, University Library

EFFECTIVE DATE: July 1, 2022

I am pleased to recommend the appointment of Donna L. Hayward as interim university librarian and dean of libraries, effective July 1, 2022 until a permanent university librarian and dean of libraries is appointed.

Donna Hayward received a bachelor's degree in music education and business from the University of Massachusetts, Lowell in 1990 and a M.S. degree in information from the University of Michigan in 2001. In 2001, she began her career at the UM University Library and has risen to her current position as associate dean. From 2001-2003, she served as an assistant librarian, from 2003-2011 as information studies subject specialist and Hatcher reference coordinator, and from 2011-2014 as the executive associate director. Between 2013 and 2014, she served in an acting capacity as the deputy director and then director of Michigan Publishing. In 2014, she was appointed the associate university librarian for budget and planning, and in 2016 as associate dean. She has given numerous presentations and poster sessions both nationally and internationally.

As an assistant librarian motivated by a personal commitment to student success, Ms. Hayward built for herself a strong foundation of service expertise in the areas of reference, consultation, instruction, and program development. In over 20 years at UM, her series of leadership roles has given her the opportunity to extend her commitment to campus into other areas. She served as the acting director of the library's publishing division during a crucial stage of the University of Michigan Press's transition to a fully integrated library unit. In her role as associate university librarian for budget and planning, she transformed the management and oversight of the library's $69 million budget by tying it directly to future strategic aspirations and providing a path to realizing them.

As the associate dean of libraries, Ms. Hayward has led the collaborative development of a strategic framework that provides structure to the library's efforts to better serve the university's 21st century research, learning, and teaching activities. In recent years, she has worked toward transforming library spaces to better serve UM students, faculty, staff, and the community.

Other recent initiatives include shoring up digital preservation efforts and developing a collection services strategy to enable informed decision-making, now and in the future.

Ms. Hayward's experience working closely with the entire library administration has positioned her to assume this interim role. I am grateful that she is willing to undertake this new responsibility during a period of transition. It is with pleasure that I recommend her appointment as interim university librarian and dean of libraries, effective July 1, 2022 until a permanent university librarian and dean of libraries is appointed.

In 2002, she joined the University of Michigan School of Dentistry Department of Orthodontics and Pediatric Dentistry as an associate professor, with tenure. In 2005, she was appointed as the director of pediatric dentistry and was appointed to the Harris Professorship in 2006.

In 2006, Professor Hu and pediatric dental team established a multi-center, long-term study that provided the scientific evidence to support the replacement of diluted formocresol with mineral trioxide aggregate for vital pulpotomy. Among her many leadership roles, Professor Hu was the director of the Oral Health Sciences PhD program from November 2010 to November 2018, and the interim chair of the Department of Orthodontics and Pediatric Dentistry from July 2015 through June 2016. Professor Hu was appointed as the chair of the Department of Biological and Materials Sciences and Prosthodontics in September of 2018 and continues to serve.

Among Professor Hu's accolades and accomplishments, she has held continuous funding from the NIH for 28 years and has contributed more than 150 peer-reviewed publications. Her research aims to determine the genetic etiology and disease mechanism of inherited disorders involving teeth. The results of her studies have contributed toward the understanding of tooth formation and mineralization, and facilitated genetic testing and interventions of patients with inherited tooth disorders. Professor Hu received the William J. Gies Award from the International Associate for Dental Research and the American Associate for Dental Research (IADR/AADR) in 2001 and 2005. In 2011, she received the Paul P. Taylor award, where she was selected as the lead author of the most prestigious journal article in Pediatric Dentistry from the previous year. This award is determined by the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry (AAPD) Editorial Board and the AAPD Awards' Committee. In 2015, she was recognized by the IADR to receive the Distinguished Scientist Award for Basic Research in Biological Mineralization Award. In 2017, Professor Hu received the Distinguished Faculty Research Mentoring award in UM's School of Dentistry.

I am pleased that Professor Hu has agreed to serve as interim dean of the School of Dentistry. She is a distinguished scholar and educator with years of experience as a faculty member, administrator, and researcher given her service. She has a long and distinguished record of service to the university and the dental community. I am confident that the school will maintain its momentum during this interim period under her leadership. I enthusiastically recommend this appointment, effective May 16, 2022 until a permanent dean is appointed.

ACTION REQUEST: Establishment of a New Academic Administrative Position

RECOMMENDED TITLE: Associate Dean of Diversity, Inclusion, Justice, and Equity,
School of Education

EFFECTIVE DATE: June 1, 2022

The dean and the executive committee of the School of Education are pleased to recommend the establishment of a new academic administrative position as associate dean of diversity, inclusion, justice, and equity, School of Education, effective June 1, 2022.

The associate dean of diversity, inclusion, justice, and equity will be responsible for overseeing strategic objectives and providing academic, administrative, and financial leadership for the School of Education's Diversity, Inclusion, Justice, and Equity (dije) initiatives.

In 2019, the dije Office and a full-time staff position were established in the School of Education as a result of the school's Year 2 DEI Strategic Plan goal to expand the organizational infrastructure to support and sustain diversity, inclusion, justice, and equity. After discussion with the governing faculty and the executive committee, the School of Education decided to replace the staff position with an academic associate dean appointment to transform the school's commitment to diversity, inclusion, justice, and equity into a permanent, cohesive structure. This role is the organizational infrastructure needed to sustain and enhance the School of Education's excellence in research, teaching, service, and public scholarship that advances diverse, inclusive, just, and equitable education locally, nationally, and globally.

We are pleased to recommend the establishment of a new academic administrative position as associate dean of diversity, inclusion, justice, and equity, School of Education, effective June 1, 2022.

ACTION REQUEST: Change in Title of an Existing Administrative Title

CURRENT TITLE: Assistant Vice President for Research-Animal Resources, UM Office of Research

RECOMMENDED TITLE: Associate Vice President for Research-Animal Care and Use Program, UM Office of Research

EFFECTIVE DATE: May 1, 2022

The UM Office of Research wishes to recommend a change in title of an existing administrative title from assistant vice president for research-animal resources, to associate vice president for research-animal care and use program, UM Office of Research, effective May 1, 2022.

Animal care and use continues to be of critical importance to the research enterprise at the University of Michigan. The animal care and use program fosters sustained excellence in animal care and use in scientific research and education and promotes the philosophy that the highest animal welfare standards are necessary for impactful science. Given the growing size and complexity of research operations, the UM Office of Research seeks to maintain and strengthen the university's commitment to responsible oversight of the use of animals in research and to unify the approach to this oversight by changing this administrative position to incorporate an expanded responsibility for direct oversight of the animal care and use office in addition to the position's current responsibilities for campus-wide oversight of animal care and use.

The associate vice president for research-animal care and use program will continue to work with the University Laboratory for Animal Medicine (ULAM) to maintain a shared and strategic vision for the animal care and use program and to assure compliance with all federal laws and guidelines and institutional policies related to the use of animals in research. This position advises researchers and the Institutional Animal Care and Use Committee (IACUC) on the proper use of animals in research and serves as an ex-officio voting member of IACUC, and develops and implements strategic vision and long-term planning for the animal care and use program on campus including the design and utilization of facilities and other necessary resources. The position assists in assuring facility and researcher compliance with NIH/Office of Laboratory Animal Welfare (OLAW) guidelines, requirements for accreditation by AAALAC International, and animal welfare regulations. Expanded responsibilities for this position will include direct oversight for the animal care and use office.

Appointments to the associate vice president for research-animal care and use program position will be made by the vice president for research. The appointee will be a University of Michigan faculty member. We therefore recommend the change in title of an existing administrative title from assistant vice president for research-animal resources, to associate vice president for research-animal care and use program, UM Office of Research, effective May 1, 2022.

ACTION REQUEST: Change in Title of an Existing Administrative Title

CURRENT TITLE: Associate Vice President for Research-Technology Transfer and Innovation Partnerships, UM Office of Research

RECOMMENDED TITLE: Associate Vice President for Research-Innovation Partnerships, UM Office of Research

EFFECTIVE DATE: May 1, 2022

The UM Office of Research wishes to recommend a change in title of an existing administrative title from associate vice president for research-technology transfer and innovation partnerships, to associate vice president for research-innovation partnerships, UM Office of Research, effective May 1, 2022.

Innovation Partnerships serves a central hub to lead research commercialization efforts, support startup company launch and growth, and create and foster corporate research alliances. This newly reorganized unit consolidates, builds on and incorporates the work of the rebranded Office of Technology Transfer and certain elements of the former Business Engagement Center. We wish to remove the reference to technology transfer from the title of this administrative position in order to better emphasize the broader focus on innovation partnerships, of which technology transfer is only one aspect.

The associate vice president for research-innovation partnerships will continue to provide strategic leadership in innovation and technology transfer activities in support of the educational and research mission of the University of Michigan. This position reports to the vice president for research and works closely with leadership across the university, as well as with regional, national, and global external partners in order to develop key innovation partnerships both internally and externally. Responsibilities include oversight of the business, legal and operational decisions and practices of Innovation Partnerships in its role as a key service and resource for innovative investigators as well as the management of policies and practices to assess, protect and commercialize the discoveries and inventions derived from University research. This position also partners with other campus programs to provide support and coordination across the innovation ecosystem, demonstrates leadership among the national and international technology transfer community to maintain the University of Michigan's reputation for innovation, creativity, integrity and performance, and engages with business, venture, and government communities regionally and nationally.

Appointments to the associate vice president for research-innovation partnerships position will be made by the vice president for research. We therefore recommend the change in title of an existing administrative title from associate vice president for research-technology transfers and innovation partnerships, to associate vice president for research-innovation partnerships, UM Office of Research, effective May 1, 2022.

On the recommendation of Gorav Ailawadi, M.D., M.B.A., the Helen F. and Marvin M. Kirsh Professor and chair of the Department of Cardiac Surgery and with the concurrence of the Executive Committee of the Medical School, I am pleased to recommend the establishment of the Frankel Research Professorship in Aortic Surgery, Medical School, effective May 1, 2022.

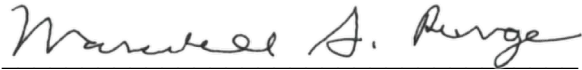

This professorship is being established through a generous gift from an anonymous donor and is intended to recognize exemplary service in complex aortic surgery. It will support the research and clinical efforts of a faculty member with a primary appointment in the Department of Cardiac Surgery and honor the Frankel family. The appointment period is up to five years and may be renewed.

Jean Frankel graduated from the University of Michigan College of Literature, Science, and the Arts with a B.A. degree in 1936. Her husband, longtime Detroit area real estate developer Samuel and their family have a long and distinguished history of involvement with and giving to the University of Michigan. The Frankel family includes numerous University of Michigan graduates; Stanley, with a B.A. degree in 1963, and M.A. degree in 1964, Bruce, with a B.B.A. degree in 1967 and Stuart, with a B.B.A. degree in 1961. Along with their daughter Jo Elyn and their spouses, the Frankel family has supported numerous fundraising priorities for the university.

The Frankel family has a history of philanthropy outside of the University of Michigan as well, extending to the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, the Detroit Institute of Arts, the Barbara Ann Karmanos Cancer Institute, Jewish schools in metro Detroit and Jerusalem, the Jewish Welfare Federation of Metro Detroit and the Children's Hospital of Detroit. Following this tradition, Stanley and his wife Judith have generously supported programs within the Jean and Samuel Frankel Center for Judaic Studies and other departments within the University of Michigan. Stanley Frankel leads Frankel Associates, a privately held commercial real estate development and management firm founded by his father and Judith Frankel has been an antiques dealer since 1991 and owns the Antiques Center of Troy.

The Frankel family's generosity has made a significant difference in research and clinical care within the University of Michigan. This prestigious professorship will continue those endeavors. I am pleased, therefore, to recommend the establishment of the Frankel Research Professorship in Aortic Surgery, Medical School, effective May 1, 2022.

ACTION REQUEST: Establishment of a Research Professorship

PROPOSED NAME: Kevin K. Tremper, Ph.D., M.D. Research Professorship,
Medical School

TERM: Five Years, Renewable

EFFECTIVE DATE: May 1, 2022

On the recommendation of George Mashour, M.D., Ph.D., the Robert B. Sweet Professor and chair of the Department of Anesthesiology, and with the concurrence of the Executive Committee of the Medical School, I am pleased to recommend the establishment of the Kevin K. Tremper, Ph.D., M.D. Research Professorship, Medical School, effective May 1, 2022.

The Kevin K. Tremper, Ph.D., M.D., Research Professorship is being established through gifts from faculty, alumni and friends of the Department of Anesthesiology. It is intended to support the clinical and research efforts of a distinguished faculty member in the Department of Anesthesiology. The appointment period is up to five years and may be renewed.

Kevin K. Tremper received his Ph.D. degree in chemical engineering from the University of California, Berkeley. He completed his M.D. degree at the University of California, Irvine. During his internship at Harbor/UCLA and a critical care research fellowship with Will Shoemaker, he conducted studies in animals and critically ill patients on various techniques for continuously monitoring oxygen and carbon dioxide. Because of this interest in tissue oxygen measurement and oxygen monitoring, he became involved in the clinical testing of the first “artificial blood” product in 1981.

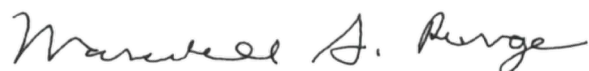

Dr. Tremper then completed a residency in anesthesiology at UCLA Medical Center and was appointed as a faculty member at the University of California, Irvine and was appointed as the chair in 1985. Dr. Tremper joined the faculty at the University of Michigan in 1990 as a professor and the chair of the Department of Anesthesiology. His research focused on continuous monitoring of respiratory gases for approximately 15 years and then switched to information systems to manage clinical data for acute perioperative care. He initiated a co-development effort with a software company, SEC, to create a perioperative information management system to be used for patient care, education, and clinical outcomes research. This company was purchased by General Electric in 2001. The Department of Anesthesiology’s perioperative patient database is one of the largest in the world and has resulted in a series of academic publications determining patients at risk for adverse outcomes.

The data from this database are currently being used to try to reduce the incidence of these outcomes by adjusting the perioperative care. In 2008, the Department of Anesthesiology initiated a nationwide and worldwide perioperative outcomes database consortium, the Multicenter Perioperative Outcomes Group (MPOG). The Department of Anesthesiology developed software which enables data from anesthesiology information management systems (AIMS) from multiple vendors to be downloaded into a common relational research database. This organization allows data sharing from multiple institutions throughout the United States, Europe and Israel. Having this broad database involving all surgical procedures from a variety of institutions have enabled retrospective database queries on a grand scale for the first time. Currently there are 42 institutions in this data sharing research consortium.

In 2008, Dr. Tremper initiated work on the development of a new generation monitoring and alerting interface: AlertWatch. This readily identifiable organ icon-based alerting system derives data from physiologic monitors, AIMS, history and physicals, and laboratory values simultaneously updated every ten seconds. Dr. Tremper has held numerous leadership positions in the field, including as the past president of the Society of Academic Anesthesiology Chairs, the Morton Society, and the Association of University Anesthesiologists. He has published 210 peer-reviewed articles and has been invited to numerous national and international venues. He is an editorial board member of the Journal of Clinical Anesthesia, the Journal of Cardiothoracic and Vascular Anesthesia, the Journal of Clinical Monitoring and the Journal of Critical Care.

This professorship will honor the accomplishments and legacy of Dr. Tremper and provide resources to faculty following in his discipline. I am pleased, therefore, to recommend the establishment of the Kevin K. Tremper, Ph.D., M.D. Research Professorship, Medical School, effective May 1, 2022.

On the recommendation of Gregory W. Dalack, M.D, the Daniel E. Offutt, III Professor and chair of the Department of Psychiatry, and with the concurrence of the Executive Committee of the Medical School, I am pleased to recommend the establishment of the Marcia A. Valenstein, M.D. Collegiate Professorship in Psychiatry, Medical School, effective May 1, 2022.

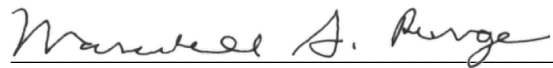

This professorship was established through the Provost Office. It is intended to honor Marcia A. Valenstein, M.D. who was faculty in the Department of Psychiatry from 1990-2017. She is currently a professor emerita. The appointment period is up to five years and may be renewed.

Marcia Valenstein received her M.D. degree in 1981 from the University of Illinois. She completed an internship and residency in psychiatry at Duke University and a residency at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, and was appointed as an assistant clinical professor at that institution. She joined the faculty at the University of Michigan in 1990 as an instructor in psychiatry and rose through the ranks to professor in 2012.

Dr. Valenstein's research focused on assessing the quality of care for patients with mental health conditions. She examined the use of psychotropic medications in national samples of patients, studying medication adherence and the pharmacological treatment of depression. She also assessed the relationships between pharmacological management of patients and suicide deaths. In addition, Dr. Valenstein was involved in developing and testing (in multiple randomized controlled trials) lower cost, and innovative ways to provide treatment to individuals with mental health conditions. These interventions included personnel who were not typically part of mental health teams, such as peers. Additionally, she investigated on-line technologies to "extend the reach" of mental health providers and worked on disseminating approaches to extending mental health expertise in primary care. Dr. Valenstein was appointed as an active professor emerita in 2017 and continues to contribute to research in this important area.

This professorship will honor Dr. Valenstein and her tenure in the Department of Psychiatry and at the University of Michigan. I am pleased, therefore, to recommend the establishment of the Marcia A. Valenstein, M.D. Collegiate Professorship in Psychiatry, Medical School, effective May 1, 2022.

ACTION REQUEST: Appointment to an Endowed Visiting Professorship

NAME: Jawad Sukhanyar

RECOMMENDED TITLE: Howard R. Marsh Visiting Professor of Journalism, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

EFFECTIVE DATES: August 29, 2022 through April 30, 2023

On the recommendation of the Executive Committees of the Department of Communication and Media and the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, we are pleased to recommend the appointment of Jawad Sukhanyar as the Howard R. Marsh Visiting Professor of Journalism, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective August 29, 2022 through April 30, 2023.

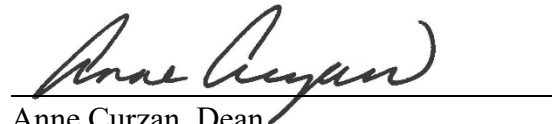

The Howard R. Marsh Visiting Professorship in Journalism was established in 1974 by a gift of securities from the Howard R. Marsh Trust. Marsh Visiting Professors are eminent professional journalists or distinguished academic scholars who lecture in undergraduate and graduate courses, teach mini-courses, and often present public lectures. This appointment is funded by the department's Marsh endowment and continues to fulfill the endowment's mission to bring an eminent journalist to the department to teach classes on the long-range factors that affect the ability of the news media to perform their functions in a democratic society.

Jawad Sukhanyar received his Bachelor of Arts in political science from Goa University in 2011 and holds a Master of Arts in political science from Indira Gandhi national Open University (2014). He most recently worked as a freelance reporter in Afghanistan from 2020-2021 after spending eight years as a reporter with the New York Times. Mr. Sukhanyar is currently the journalist-in-residence at Wallace House, a specially created fellowship to support Mr. Sukhanyar after his escape from Afghanistan in August 2021.

Mr. Sukhanyar will teach two courses each semester for the department. The first, "Examining the Media's Role in the Rise and Fall of Democracy in Afghanistan," will examine the role of a free press during the historic twenty-year period since 9/11 in Afghanistan. Topics of discussion will include the evolution of news coverage during this period, the new government's complicated relation with the press, the reaction of cultural conservatives to new entertainment outlets and the state of media institutions as the political situation in the country deteriorated. The second, "Global Threats to Press Freedom," will examine press freedoms around the world, from countries with well-established democratic traditions to those with dictator regimes. Several countries will be featured as case studies to discuss the challenges and obstacles journalists face in carrying out their duties to inform the public. The state of press freedom in the United States will also be an on-going discussion topic.

We are very pleased to recommend the appointment of Jawad Sukhanyar as the Howard R. Marsh Visiting Professor of Journalism, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective August 29, 2022 through April 30, 2023.

NAME: Ruby C.M. Tapia

CURRENT TITLES: Chair, Department of Women's and Gender Studies, Associate Professor of Women's and Gender Studies, with tenure, and Associate Professor of English Language and Literatures, with tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

RECOMMENDED TITLES: Chair, Department of Women's and Gender Studies, Associate Professor of Women's and Gender Studies, with tenure, and Associate Professor of English Language and Literatures, without tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts

On the recommendation of the Executive Committees of the Department of Women's and Gender Studies and the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, and with the endorsement of the Department of English Language and Literatures, we are pleased to recommend the transfer of tenure for Ruby C.M. Tapia from associate professor of women's and gender studies, with tenure, and associate professor of English language and literatures, with tenure, to associate professor of women's and gender studies, with tenure, and associate professor of English language and literatures, without tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective August 29, 2022.

Ruby C.M. Tapia received her Bachelor of Arts from Cornell University in 1995. She then attended the University of California, San Diego where she earned her Master of Arts in 1998 and her doctorate in 2002. Professor Tapia began her instructional career at The Ohio State University as an assistant professor, without tenure, in 2002 and was promoted to associate professor, with tenure, in 2008. She joined our faculty as an associate professor, with tenure, in 2011, and has served as the chair of the Department of Women's and Gender Studies since 2020.

Professor Tapia's work engages the intersections of photography theory, feminist and critical race theory, and critical prison studies. She is co-editor of Interrupted Life: Experiences of Incarcerated Women in the United States (University of California Press, 2010) and author of American Pietàs: Visions of Race, Death and the Maternal (University of Minnesota Press, 2011). Recently, Professor Tapia's scholarship and teaching have begun to employ social science methods to augment visual analysis. Her current book project, The Camera in the Cage: Prison Photography and the Abject Sentimentality of the Exception (forthcoming, Fordham University Press), interrogates the junctions of prison photography and carceral humanism and puts forth an argument and methodology for abolitionist aesthetics. This ongoing research trajectory will be best supported by the opportunity for increased engagement with colleagues in the Department of Women's and Gender Studies.

Professor Tapia's current courses include "Feminist Theory," a graduate-level course, and "Narratives of Girlhood," a cross-listed course in the Department of English Language and Literatures. After completing her term as chair, she will continue to teach these courses as needed as well as "Introduction to Women's and Gender Studies," "Gender, Race, and the Prison," and a special topics seminar, "Critical Carceral Visualities." The appointment in English will allow Professor Tapia to continue her involvement in the department, specifically through her work mentoring graduate students and junior faculty.

In addition to her role as the chair of the department, Professor Tapia is the lead faculty member of the Critical Carceral Visualities component of the Documenting Criminalization and Confinement project at the university's Humanities Collaboratory. In 2020, she founded the Women's and Gender Studies Grants for Internships and Research on Sexual Harassment and Gender-Based Violence and co-founded the Herman Undergraduate Internship Fund to support community-based volunteer and leadership work to benefit women, securing gift funds of $500,000 from the Herman family. Professor Tapia has also facilitated creative writing workshops via the Prison Creative Arts Project at Women's Huron Valley Correctional Facility in Michigan and is a member of the Theory Group Think Tank at Macomb Correctional Facility for men. She will continue to be involved in relevant department committees in the Department of English Language and Literatures.

We are very pleased to recommend the transfer of tenure for Ruby C.M. Tapia from associate professor of women's and gender studies, with tenure, and associate professor of English language and literatures, with tenure, to associate professor of women's and gender studies, with tenure, and associate professor of English language and literatures, without tenure, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, effective August 29, 2022.
