ACTION REQUEST

Subject: Report of Faculty Retirement

Action Requested: Adoption of Retirement Memoir

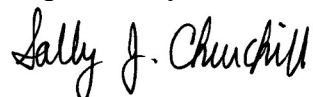

Craig A. Jaffe, M.D., clinical associate professor of internal medicine, retired from active faculty status on January 1, 2022.

Dr. Jaffe received his M.D. degree from the University of Michigan in 1986. He completed his internship and residency at the University of Pittsburgh in 1989. He then completed an endocrinology and metabolism fellowship at the University of Michigan from 1990-93. After his training, Dr. Jaffe joined the University of Michigan faculty as a clinical lecturer in 1993, and was promoted to clinical assistant professor in 1995, and clinical associate professor in 2003. In 1996, he was also recruited as a staff physician for the Ann Arbor Veteran's Affairs Health System.

At the University of Michigan, Dr. Jaffe has had a variety of duties and milestones during his tenure. His service to the university was admirable as he contributed to many programs within the Department of Internal Medicine's Division of Metabolism, Endocrinology, and Diabetes. From 2003-18, Dr. Jaffe served as the clinical service chief for the division at the University of Michigan and at the Veterans Affairs Ann Arbor Health System. In this role, he oversaw physician operations in the endocrine practice at all outpatient clinic locations. Dr. Jaffe also served as the director of the Hypopituitary Clinic from 2003-17, where he was integral to the success of this specialty clinic. In 2017, Dr. Jaffe turned his focus to education as he became the associate chief of staff/education. His commitment to education received recognition as the recipient of the Endocrine Fellows' Outstanding Teacher of the Year Award (2011, 2021). As a practicing clinician, he is committed to improving patient care within endocrinology and is dedicated to providing top-tier health care to his patients.

The Regents now salute this distinguished faculty member by naming Craig A. Jaffe, clinical associate professor emeritus of internal medicine.
